W. J. HARTNETT GETS 2 YEARS AT HARD LABOR

William J. Hartnett, self-confessed jury bribery in connection with the famous Crocker will case, was today sentenced to two years at hard labor in the House of Correction by Judge Sanderson in the Suffolk County Superior Criminal Court.

Sentence was imposed after Attorney Patrick Henry Kelley, attorney for Hartnett, had made sensational charges that Hartnett had been given $30 by a Boston police captain with which to leave Boston.

Kelley opposed sentence on the ground that Hartnett had been promised immunity by the late District Attorney John B. Moran, and by other officials of the District Attorney's office since.

Attacks District Attorney.

Attorney Kelley, vociferously arraigned District Attorney Pelletier for action which Kelley termed unfair. Kelley was warned by Judge Sanderson not to make the issue a personal one.

Hartnett was brought across the street from police headquarters into the courthouse at 10:25. He was escorted by Police Inspector Pierce, who made the arrest last night. After Assistant Clerk Campbell read the indictment against Hartnett, District Attorney Pelletier moved the court for sentence. Attorney Kelley immediately moved that the case be held over for a week, so that he might have more time for preparation.

"I had no chance to see the indictment," said Attorney Kelley. "I know that my client was promised immunity by the prosecutors in the case when he testified before the grand juries."

Denies Hartnett Defaulted.

Kelley denied that his client had defaulted intentionally on December 6, when the case came up for sentence. He told the court that Hartnett had never been notified of the date set for the trial.

District Attorney Pelletier opposed any further delay in the sentencing of the prisoner.

"I now note that sentence be imposed on the plea of guilty entered by Hartnett. I do not know what Mr. Moran offered him. I do know that Mr. Hill made a statement to the Court that no promise had been given to Hartnett or anybody else of immunity."

Attorney Kelley—Mr. Lavelle of your office promised immunity to Hartnett.

Judge Sanderson—I will hear all the evidence on immunity.

Attorney Kelley—I was called on the case today. Hartnett was arrested last night. I will put Pelletier and Lavelle on the stand.

Kelley and Pelletier in Tilt.

Attorney Kelley then turned on Pelletier and said: "I hold you up. I helped to elect you, and I will help to lick you."

District-Attorney Pelletier—Sir I understand, but the court room should not be used for that purpose.

Judge Sanderson—Mr. Pelletier, will you kindly tell me what has been done with the other defendants in this case.

Pelletier—One of the jurymen was sentenced to two years in the House of Correction. The other was found not guilty.

Kelley then called Hartnett to the stand.

Q.—Had you any agreement with John B. Moran? A.—Yes.

Q.—Are you the man who bribed Killian and Cronin? A.—Yes.

Q.—Who was acting for you at the time when immunity was promised? A.—Joseph Lundy was acting for my brother and my mother when he was promised by Moran.

At this point Assistant District Attorney Lavelle came into the courtroom and took his seat beside Mr. Pelletier.

Shortly after this Mr. Pelletier said that he would not attempt to answer many of the personal matters that had been brought up by Attorney Kelley, and moved that sentence be passed.

The judge then sentenced Hartnett to two years in the House of Correction.

MRS. W. GALLAGHER, BRIDE IN ROMANCE OF REVERE COUPLE

Mrs. Gallagher was Miss Catherine Killgannon and her marriage to William Gallagher was a surprise to their friends.

REVERE COUPLE FOOL FRIENDS

Miss Catherine Killannon and William Gallagher, son of former Selectman James H. Gallagher, both of Revere, have surprised their friends by being married quietly and getting away on a wedding trip before anybody guessed their intentions.

Mr. Gallagher and his bride were campanions and their friends believed that they intended to be married, but they gave no hint that they would wed without the knowledge of their parents. Yesterday, however, the Rev James H. Hickey of the Church of Our Lady, Beachmont, married them at the home of the bride's mother in State Road, Revere.

Mr. and Mrs. Gallagher hurried away to New Hampshire on their wedding trip. On their return they will live in Winthrop avenue, Revere.

HURRIES TO AID VESSELS IN ICE

VINEYARD HAVEN, Feb. 14.—The revenue cutter Gresham left here today to help schooners ice bound in Nantucket Sound. Arrangements also were made for another mail-carrying trip to the Island.

The Gresham came in early to-day with the schooner Ralph N. Hayward, Boston for New York. The Hayward has been iced in off Great Point since Sunday.

When the Hayward had been anchored here the Gresham started out to pull the schooner Henry S. Little, Boston for Newport News, out of the clutch of the ice near Handkerchief Shoals lightship.

TELLS OF LASSOING ANIMALS IN AFRICA

Colonel Charles J. ("Buffalo") Jones, the naturalist, began a series of lectures in Tremont Temple on nature subjects, with a description of his experience while lassoing wild game, lions and rhinos in Africa. "Buffalo" Jones has a tremendously interesting fund of anecdotes dating back to the days when he won his name by shooting seventy-two buffalo without stopping from his tracks. The lectures were illustrated by remarkable motion picture films, showing him in the act of lassoing wild beasts. Several of his captures are now lodged in the Bronx Zoo.

EDITOR LAWYERS BEGIN DEFENCE OF THE LEADER

LAWRENCE, Feb. 14.—The prosecution in the preliminary trial of Joseph J. Ettor and Arthur Giovannitti, charged with being accessories before the fact to the murder of Annie Lo Pizzi, who was shot and killed in a riot on the evening of Jan. 29, closed their case at 12:30 this afternoon. After recess for luncheon the defence of the two prisoners began.

Lawyer Mahoney argued for Ettor that there had been no evidence introduced that any mob had heard speeches made by Ettor on the Common and asked that all reference to them be stricken out.

District Attorney Atwill declared that the whole mob—1,800 of them—were guilty of complicity in the murder of the woman. His contention was that the act of the strikers was precipitated as a result of the speeches that had been made by Ettor and Giovannitti.

The attorneys for the defence were unable to get any of the testimony eliminated with the exception of a green circular printed in Italian. It was not shown that either Ettor or Giovannitti had anything to do with the printing of this.

Policeman Walter G. Spenger, who had charge of the police detail in the crowd on the evening of January 29, when Annie Lo Pezzi was shot, was the witness today. He said there were eight policemen in the squad.

Policeman Tells of Riots.

Q.—Was it dark or dusk when the trouble took place? A.—Dark.

Q.—Were you on the Common earlier when Ettor and Giovannitti were there? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you see either of them in the mob at the time of the shooting? A.—No.

Q.—Describe the conditions as you found them at the corner of Union and Garden streets? A.—The street was blocked with strikers. They were yelling and cursing. We drove the crowd up Union.

Q.—What were the strikers doing? A.—They threw stones, bricks and coal at the police. Some of the missiles came from the crowd.

Q.—Did you see and hear any shooting? A.—Yes, the shooting began just after we drove the crowd away.

Q.—How many shots were fired? A.—Oh, fifteen or twenty.

Q.—Did the police use their clubs? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you notice a woman fall? A.—Yes. I was near Policeman Benoit at the time. I would not say from which direction the shots came. There were two flashes near Policeman Benoit.

Q.—Then the woman dropped? A.—Yes. It was at that time that the police were ordered to draw their revolvers. We advanced on the men then with drawn revolvers.

Cross-examined by Lawyer Mahoney, Spranger testified no policeman fired a shot. He said twenty-five or thirty persons had been laid low with clubs.

The charge has been made by the defence that they would show that Annie Lo Pezzi was killed by the bullet of a policeman.

Mill Men Claim Gains.

The mill men claimed gains in the ranks of the operatives today. It was estimated there were from 12,000 to 14,000 operatives out on strike today, and not quite so many at work.

Jager Scanlon told Governor Foss that Lawrence would be helpless without the mills. The Governor retorted that Lawrence would help to show some backbone or the mills would take entire charge of the situation.

Strikers prepared to march in a body from Lawrence to the State House in Boston.

Skilled operatives on strike arranged to confer with the agents of six mills.

The greatest excitement prevailed in the various strike headquarters when it became known that another of their number had been added to the list of bayonet victims. The man is Patrick Jordan of No. 47 Oxford street, and he is at the Emergency Hospital with two severe gashes in his left forearm.

Jordan, according to the report given out at the hospital was walking along Hampshire street near Lowell early today when ordered to move on by one of the soldiers of Company B, Fifth Regiment, doing duty in that section.

He refused and the soldier jabbed him with the bayonet. As he did so Jordan raised his arm to protect himself and received two stab wounds. An ambulance

MICHAEL E. YOUNG, INDICTED IN BIG DYNAMITE CASE

Boston man who is a member of the general executive committee of the International Bridge and Structural Iron Workers' Union of America.

Michael J. Young is fifty-seven years old and a member of the general executive committee of the International Bridge and Structural Iron Workers' Union, and is now serving his third term in that position. He was present at the executive committee meeting in Indianapolis when John J. McNamara, their secretary-treasurer, was placed under arrest for dynamiting.

He has just been elected business agent of the United Housesmiths and Bridgemen's Union of Boston for the ninth consecutive year.

Mr. Young is married and has six children and has lived in this city twenty-one years.

Young in a recent statement said: "I have absolutely nothing to hide. I stand ready to assist in every way possible any accredited representative of the government seeking to determine whether or not Union labor in any way violated the law.

"A full synopsis of the proceedings of each committee meeting, held by our International during the years I have served upon it, always has been published in the following issue of the Bridgemen's Magazine, the official journal of our union.

"Every member could read that account. There was nothing hidden from them. There can be nothing found upon the written records for the position of the government which has not already been published in full and fair detail.

"I am stunned, even today, by McNamara's confession. I have known John J. McNamara personally for six years. I could have laid down my life on his insistence. I only know that I have done nothing wrong, that I have nothing to be ashamed of and nothing to hide."

UNITED SHOE FACES COURT

While hearing arguments on demurrers in the United Shoe Machinery case in the United States District Court today, Judge Putnam declared the decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Standard Oil case had been "grossly misinterpreted." He said that Justice White of the United States Supreme Court "never laid down a 'rule of reason' for the interpretation of the Sherman law."

The Shoe Machinery case, which came before Judge Putnam today, is the criminal prosecution of five officers of the United Shoe Machinery Company on indictments charging them with conspiracy in restraint of trade in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

The defendants are President Sidney W. Winslow, Assistant Treasurer Edward P. Hurd and Directors Elmer E. Howe, William Barbour and George W. Brown of the United Shoe Machinery Company. They were arrested, were arraigned some weeks ago and were bailed in $10,000 each.

Today's hearing by Judge Putnam was on the demurrers filed on behalf of the defendants. President Winslow and Director Howe were the only two defendants in court. They were represented by Henry H. Hurlburt, Charles F. Choate and Boyd B. Jones, former United States District Attorney.

Opposed to this brilliant array of legal talent were the government counsel, consisting of United States District Attorney Asa F. French, Edwin H. Abbot, Jr., and Special Assistant Attorney-General William C. Gregg, representing Attorney-General Wickersham.

Almost fifty prominent shoe manufacturers and attorneys interested in corporation law were present. Among them were George E. Keith and Allen Webster of Brockton, Charles H. Jones, president of the Commonwealth Shoe & Leather Company and one who has been active in demanding investigation of the United Shoe Machinery Company, and William H. Coolidge, general counsel for the Boston & Maine Railroad.

Attorney Hurlburt opened for the defence. He read the counts in the indictment, with comments. Then he said, in part: At one time, when a count charging "corrupt conspiracy" was under discussion, Judge Putnam had Mr. Hurlburt read the exact language of the charge four times. The judge said he wished to have the charges clearly understood before proceeding.

In discussion of monopoly and restraint of trade, within the meaning of the Sherman law, Judge Putnam referred to the famous Standard Oil decision of the United States Supreme Court.

It will be recalled that Justice White of the United States Supreme Court was said by the newspapers to have laid down the "rule of reason" in this case. The United States Supreme Court was quoted as saying in its decision that there should be a "reasonable interpretation" of the Sherman law. The newspapers had it that the United States Supreme Court construed the law to apply to "unreasonable restraint of trade."

NEW STRIKE OF LONGSHOREMEN

Eighteen hundred of the 2,500 striking longshoremen marched to work at the docks this morning, in compliance with an agreement made last week, but a few hours afterwards 400 men employed in loading and unloading the Devonian and Cambrian in East Boston quit abruptly because the Leyland line officers refused to reinstate the freight clerks who struck in sympathy with the longshoremen.

Efforts were made to adjust the new difficulty, but the men steadfastly refused to work until the striking clerks got their old jobs.

It is stated that despite statements from Washington, thirty more will be indicted, and that the new indictments will include "three higher ups."

Is of especial interest to Boston, for it is charged that the men who planned the blowing up of the Los Angeles Times, in which [illegible] men lost their lives, and for which the McNamaras went to prison, plotted the destruction of the incompleted Boston Opera House and of the Springfield Municipal building.

Ryan is charged with transporting dynamite and conspiring to transport it illegally against the regulations of the Interstate Commerce Commissioners.

Ortie McManigal and John J. McNamara were the principals in the cases at bar.

One In Philadelphia.

In Philadelphia, Michael J. Cunnee, business agent of the International Structural Ironworkers, was arrested at 9 o'clock, at the headquarters of the union, charged with conspiracy in shipping dynamite from Indianapolis to Bucyrus, Ohio. The arrest was made by Peter D. Helms, deputy United States marshal, and Frank Garlantine, a special agent of the United States government, on warrants sworn out at Indianapolis. It is understood there would be one other arrest made today.

At Davenport, Iowa, Daniel Buckley, business agent of the local organization of the iron workers, was arrested.

MORE THAN 80 DYNAMITE CASES ARE INVOLVED

The McNamaras entered upon their dynamiting career in the latter part of 1906 and continued it until they were overhauled by the Burns detective agency. Since that time there has been no dynamiting.

The cases are grand jury investigated, which are believed to have been planned and carried out under John J. McNamara's direction, include a total of eighty-seven, and there are many others for which he is believed to be responsible, but which cannot be traced directly to him. In every case there was a reason why organized labor should have a grudge against the sufferer from the dynamiting plot. Usually it was a case of open shop, the purchase of material made in such a way as the employment of men who were not members of a union.

The dynamiting campaign opened at Cleveland late in 1906 and though it spread out broadly in the following year that city appears to have been a favorite of the conspirators.

Looking over the record of dynamiting the Federal authorities are surprised that it could have continued so long without detection of the criminals and apparently without any organized efforts on the part of the sufferers to run them down.

New Haven Road Suffered.

This is all the more strange when it is seen that certain firms and certain railroads were sufferers time and again. Among these were the American Steel & Wire Company, the American Bridge Company, the Pennsylvania Steel Company, the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company, the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company, the Pittsburg Construction Company and A. M. Blodgett & Co.

The following list shows the more important dynamiting outrages attributed to the iron workers' organization and with most of which James B. McNamara was connected under the direction of his brother John:

September 25, 1905—Dynamite found on derrick used in construction of a Nickel Plate bridge at Cleveland, O.

MILL STRIKER IS BAYONETED

was called and Jordan was taken to the hospital.

The State police, reinforced by inspectors from the local force, are busy today trying to locate the slayer of Annie LoFazzi, who was shot during the strike riots of January 29, in connection with which Ettor and Giovannitti are being tried, as accessories before the fact.

Pleasant Valley, a colony made up of Italians and Syrians, which is located between this city and Haverhill, is the centre of the activity, as it is believed that the suspect is in hiding in one of the many little shacks which make up the community.

The police declare they will have their man rounded up before nightfall.

The first step in the day's peace came today in the shape of notes from the various agents of the Pacific, Atlantic, Wood, Washington, Dr. Prospect, Arlington, Duck and Kunhardt Mills, in which they agreed to treat with the strikers regarding terms of settlement.

Letter from Agents.

The letter which was delivered by the officials of the A. F. of L. are very much the same in tone. One of them follows:

James B. Wendle:

Dear Sir—Your letter of the 12th instant received. We shall be glad to meet any of our own operatives and we feel that they should be as prompt in making arrangements as we are.

William Barrels of the Duck Mills was the only one, however, to specify any time. He wrote that he would meet the workers at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Plans for Peace.

The A. F. of L. committee met at 9 o'clock this morning to arrange its demands and plan for the meetings later in the day, and all hands were more than pleased at the outlook.

To offset this move on the part of the Central Labor officials Haywood and Thompson, the I. W. W. leaders, have sent notice to all the strikers to get at 2 o'clock.

It is planned to have the men march in single file up Essex street, having every second or third man drop into the stores along the route, but without purchasing anything, and then rejoin the line.

This system has been adopted as a means of disregarding Colonel Sweetser's order that any attempt to parade would meet with severe setback.

Trouble is looked for as a result and Colonel Sweetser declined to be ready for any emergency.

The importation of children has roused the Board of Health and action is promised when the children are gathered for shipment on Saturday. It is reported from New York that many of the little ones are suffering from what is known as pellagra and as this is contagious, the doctors have decided that not only will any of the affected children to be taken away.

Coxey Army Plan.

Haywood, Ettor and Giovannitti are also busy today arranging for a monster parade to the State House in Boston. He has issued a call to all men employed to join this demonstration, which will be after the Coxey army plan.

The parade is scheduled for Monday. The men are to meet outside the city limits in Lawrence and march in file to Beacon Hill and then to the State House.

It is also planned to have Morrison I. Swift, the socialist agitator, who is now in Boston, address the crowd from the steps of the State House.

The same double guard is doing duty at the county jail here and Giovannitti and Ettor are being tried. More than forty witnesses are to be called by the defence and the trial is likely to go over until Friday or Saturday.

The officials of the American Federation of Labor say that they have presented to a day toward effecting a settlement of the Lawrence textile strike. After quite a few weeks' careful preparation by an operatives' committee of higher wage schedules with the auspices of the Central Labor Union, consent has been secured from each mill agent for a conference with three of his own employes to consider these demands.

Arrangement of the schedules has been such that the bill which will be presented to each agent affects only the workers in the manufactory.

That the American Federation will make an effort to organize the textile workers immediately, if a settlement is reached, was announced by James H. Meade, trustee of the Central Labor Union.

Mr. Meade will propose to the agents that they consent to organization of the operatives under the American Federation of Labor, in order to prevent a recurrence of the present situation.

He states he will demonstrate to them the advantages of having the workers in the older body, on the ground that a strike will not occur as the result of a wage dispute until the matter is discussed thoroughly by committees of employers and employes.

It was denied by Mr. Meade that the organization project will be allowed to stand in the way of settlement.

"If the agents refuse to accede to this proposition," he said, "we shall go right ahead with the arbitration, regardless. First we want a settlement; organization will follow if possible."

Leaders of the Industrial Workers of the World, who have directed the strike since it started and the action of the American Federation, and declare that they do not take seriously the possibility of its securing a satisfactory adjustment. Both William D. Haywood and James Thompson, I. W. W. organizers, declare that the greater part of the operatives who they assert are controlled by their organization, are out of sympathy with the Federation movement, and will not consent to go back to work under terms which it may arrange.

Thompson said that the strike is stronger now than at any other time since it began. All the operatives out on the mills are reporting at the call of that body, and they force the owners to come to terms, he declared, tonight.

To offset the efforts of the A. F. of L., a demonstration of the strength of the I. W. W. strikers is planned today. It has been arranged to have every striking operative appear on Essex street at noontime and walk up and down the thoroughfare, not as a parade, but as individuals.

Every store along the street will be visited, but there will be no parading. It is believed that by this showing the strikers can evade the orders against parades issued by the militia officials.

AVIATOR DIPS UNDER BROOKLYN BRIDGE

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—New Yorkers were treated to two sensational aeroplane flights. Frank Coffyn in his hydroplane, made his third flight over New York harbor within ten days, and George W. Beatty flew from Nassau boulevard, Long Island, and landed in Central Park. Coffyn's flight was highly spectacular, including dips underneath both the Brooklyn and Manhattan bridges. After passing over them at a height of 700 or 800 feet, he made a wide turn which carried him over the Brooklyn Navy Yard.

Rheumatism Yields to the Great Kidney Remedy.

I have been troubled with rheumatism for the last five years. Suffered with much pain in the limbs, back and feet and my joints have been badly swollen. Also suffered from constipation. Besides having a regular physician, I had tried every remedy without receiving any real benefit until I accidently came across a bottle of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root. I began taking it, never thinking it would help me, but must acknowledge it has done wonders for me. Have taken more than a dozen bottles and feel that it has been a God-send to me. I am recommending it to all my friends.

Yours very truly,

MILL STRIKERS' CHILDREN LURED FROM HOME

Like Pied Piper's Victims at Hamelin, Many May Never Return to Lawrence Parents.

LAWRENCE, Feb. 14.—Even as the Pied Piper, with his magic flute, won the children from Hamelin, the little German town, and tolled them to a cave where they were lost, so the children of the striking poor in Lawrence have been enticed away and their hapless parents have little or no realization of why or where they went.

The fathers and mothers of these children are human. They long for the exiles to New York, but a peculiar situation confronts them.

Fictitious Stories of Fortune.

Brought from a foreign land with the belief that at the end of the rainbow of their journey they would find the fictitious pot of gold, they were hurled across the sea and set into an environment that was a new world to them.

They could speak no English; they did not know the laws of the land; they had a vague and entirely erroneous idea of "freedom" and "liberty" as represented by the Stars and Stripes.

Coming from countries ruled by monarchal mandate, the poor and helpless immigrants were thrown into Lawrence with but a narrow avenue of action—the road to the mill and the road back to their humble homes.

These people in the mills knew nothing about prices or wages and even when they received only $5 and $6 a week for work for which operatives formerly received two and three times that amount, they had nothing to do but accept it.

It may have appeared good pay, even, until the rent and food bills began to come in. Then they found that they were in a new and foreign land, chained to mill machines and barely able to earn enough to fill the hungry mouths of their children.

Found a Land of Toil.

Instead of a land of plenty, where their children might be brought up with pleasing surroundings, good food, good clothing and a chance for education, they found it a land of unremitting toil, that called for the efforts of father, mother and even the children to make a living.

Then as a crowning blow to their hopes came the strike. The tumults of revolution as it had been heard at home, with the revolutionary songs in their home tongue, split the air.

The cry for bread was heard even as it was heard in the streets of Paris before the French Revolution and has been heard in many another foreign city. And these poor, dazed, stricken mothers knew not what they were doing when in the course of the turmoil they were told that their children must be taken to New York, to Philadelphia, to Washington—one name meant as much to them as another and none meant anything to them!

These mothers have let their children go, not knowing that it is something entirely foreign to American custom—that it is unprecedented even in industrial war, with the vague hope that something good may result from it.

It may be, they think, that they will get work more quickly and that their pay will be greater. It may be, they think, that their little ones will receive better care.

Mothers Know Not Why.

But not a mother or a father in Lawrence can be found who has any clear idea of why their children have been taken away or what the result of the whole terrible fight for bread means.

The children that were lured from Hamelin by the Pied Piper in revenge never returned. It may be that some of these children will never return. But the mothers and the fathers are too confused in their fight for food in the slave shops of the city to think much about their children, and that is one of the most pathetic features of the startling situation.

Read what some of the mothers have to say about it and you will realize how helpless, how stunned they are. This is what Mrs. J. M. Fiato, of No. 142 Common street, had to say:

"They said my little ones would be well fed and cared for, and that if a lot of children went it would help end the strike and bring much money. We didn't have much to eat here, so I let our little girls go—Carolina, aged nine, and Josef, five. I expect to have them brought back at the end of the strike.

"Of course I miss them a great deal. They are all the children we have. It is lonesome without them. At first I did not want to have them leave me, but on thinking it over I decided it was best—better for them and for their father and me.

Story of Privations.

"You see, we have no money now and what food we get is charged up to us.

That is why we can't get a great deal at a time. In New York our daughters will get all they want to eat and to wear. I suppose Caroline will go to school as she did in Lawrence. I cried very much when they first went, but now I have got used to it, and when I think they will be so much warmer and comfortable like, then I am glad and try to think of something else."

Fiato is a member of the I. W. W. and has been on strike since the start. He earned $7.35 a week as a wool-washer at the Wood mill. The strike came at a hard time for him. He had just recovered from a three-months' illness which sapped all of his savings.

Mrs. Alba Rivello of No. 102 Common street said she let one of her four children go—the oldest, Josef, aged eleven, "for I don't know when I shall see Josef again," said Mrs. Rivello solemnly. "He was a good boy and a help to me in many things. It was hard for me to let him go. I have so much to do caring for the other three that I don't have time to feel much about Josef.

"We are very poor. That makes it easier for us to feed three mouths instead of four. Besides, they say Josef will not suffer, that he will have warm things and all he wants to eat, which he didn't have here. They told me to let him go would help the strike and bring back money and I said they might have Josef if they would be careful."

Mr. Rivello earned $6.72 a week as a carder in the Everett mill. He is so enthused over the I. W. W. fight that he didn't seem to be overconcerned about home affairs. They have been living on the soup kitchens and on credit.

Union Leaders Condemn Act.

Maynard W. Stevenson, secretary of the Lawrence Central Labor Union, commenting upon the taking of the children from Lawrence said:

"It was the most disgraceful and inhuman act that was ever committed in Lawrence or any other city. The idea of sending those poor little children away so that they can get a percentage of the moving picture receipts is horrible to think of. Those people will never get any of the money coming from the moving picture receipts for this act. It will merely go to fill the coffers and pockets of those other than the strikers. These people are always talking about merciless corporations, but in this instance they have practically given away to the railroad corporation $1,000 for nothing, for this is what it cost them for the transportation of the children to New York."

George W. Ramsden, first vice-president of the Lawrence Central Labor Union, said:

"I really think that it would have been a great deal better to have left the children right here in Lawrence. I am sure that Lowe could have been nicely cared for here, and that the trip was a needless expense, causing needless exposure. Of course I do not say that the committee in charge of the affair did not consider it best to send them away. They probably did. But I personally think that it was unnecessary action, and it should not have been allowed."

Mrs. Rivelo of Lawrence sent one of these little ones to New York. Rosina is at her right. She is holding James. Salvatore is the other boy. This picture was taken by an American photographer.

NOTT HELD IN FORGERY CASE

After being watched for several weeks Charles E. Nott, twenty years old, who has lived under several fictitious names, was straigned today in Roxbury District Court, charged with forging a check for $45, signed with the name of Edwin C. Beck, on the People's National Bank.

This case was immediately nolle prossed, under instructions of the District Attorney's office and Nott was taken to the Superior Court by Police Inspector Sheehan for strangument on an indictment charging check forgery.

Nott, who handled a Cohasset express business during the Summer, is accused of having forged a score of checks in the past two years. He is accused of having operated under the names of Clarence L. Smith, Charles Smith, Allen Maycumber and Alberg O. Caldwell. Detectives watched him for weeks, but he succeeded in evading all of their traps.

TAILORS FIND BOWLEGS MANY

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—After long and serious deliberation, the National Association of Merchant Tailors are in convention has reached the following conclusions:

That the Spring fashions shall represent long lines and stylized materials. (For piece of news is intended for fat men especially.)

The lines will follow the natural figure, no padding, no hip-pegs, no double collars, and narrow, long revers for stout men.

The men are slaves to fashion as much as women.

The new Tuxedo shall be gray instead of black, to enable one to distinguish one's friends from the waiter.

That American men hate the high silk hat and only wear it under cover of a carriage at nightfall.

That American men would prefer knee breeches and English court costume to the traditional dress suit, but they haven't the figure of the European count dandy, the lithe and navy men, to enable them to wear it. (Too many Americans are bowlegged.)

That it requires forty-six varieties of garments to make a man.

That the New Yorker is the best dressed man in the country.

That the American man will wear European clothes in Europe, but is ashamed to do so on Fifth avenue.

The message also intimated that Mr. Eliot would now pursue his course of lectures as originally laid out.

DIVORCE SUIT IS NEWS TO CONNOR

James F. Connor of No. 120 Dartmouth street was tremendously surprised to hear of the divorce suit filed against him by his wife, Dorothy E. Connor, who alleges cruel and abusive treatment and has attached her husband through the State Street Trust Company in $15,000. Connor is a well-known wholesale and retail liquor dealer with place of business at

"Divorce?" said he. "Guess you must have the wrong man, Dorothy E.? Yes, that's my wife, and the State Street Trust is right, too. It must be true, but this is news to me. The first I knew of it. My wife never even gave me an inkling she intended any such action.

"Why, she was in to see me here only last Saturday night. She has been coming to see me right along. It is true my wife and I have not been living together for the last six months, but we're been friends. Just the same.

"That 'cruel and abusive treatment' is nonsense. Why, we never even had a real quarrel. We had our little spats and decided it was better for us both to live apart, that is all. You can call it incompatibility of temperament if you want to.

DENIES ABUSE OF CHILDREN

Miss Mary F. Rabell, in charge of the House of Prayer Orphanage at No. 8 New Cross street, Somerville, today denied to Judge Lawton in East Cambridge Probate Court all of the charges made by children that they had been abused in her home. She admitted having struck one child with a small stick and another with a strap, and that she had thrown a little girl in a girl's face "to stop her hysterical weeping," but she denied that she was cruel.

Miss Rabell was in court prepared to make a stubborn fight. She was accompanied by seven little children and had J. J. Ballentyne as counsel. Mr. Ballantyne said that he had been retained by Alexander McGregor of the Governor's Council, who had knowledge of the orphanage and was interested in it.

Would Be Guardian.

Miss Rabell's lawyer asked that she be appointed guardian of Frank and James Wilson, respectively twelve and ten years old, whose cases were the cause of the action in Probate Court. Frederick E. Greene of Cambridge, an agent of the Children's Aid Society, had petitioned to be made guardian of the children, and it was this petition that started the proceedings.

Miss Rabell said that she had had Frank Wilson at the orphanage for the past seven years and that when his mother died a year after he entered the home she asked Miss Rabell to take James also. Miss Rabell said that the Scotch Charitable Association and its ladies' auxiliary had aided these children.

In reply to the accusation of cruelty, Miss Rabell said that when the children were rebellious she talked and reasoned with them, sent them to bed or denied them some things they liked. She did admit striking a child with a stick a half-inch thick, from which the bark had been removed, because he had set fire to the mail box. On another occasion a boy had given her a strap "to see if they were bad," but she had only struck one blow once on the hand with it and had then thrown it into the fire.

Boy Ran Away Twice.

She said that the oldest Wilson boy ran away twice. She denied that she had ever sent children out to beg.

Answering the story of Ida Harris, thirteen years old, that she had struck the girl, thrown cold water on her and made her stand in the cold, Miss Rabell said that the girl was disappointed about something and cried hysterically. At the suggestion of a woman who was present, she threw a half teacupful of water in the girl's face, in order to stop the hysterical outburst. She said that the Harris girl stayed in the hall of her own free will and seeing she was stubborn,

She denied striking a boy at the table and another in the bath room. She said that she never threw a boy on the floor and kicked him, but said that she did lay a boy on the floor.

Miss Rabell, Accused of Cruelty to Orphans, and Group of Little Ones at House of Prayer

Miss Rabell, who declares she runs her Somerville House of Prayer Orphanage in Somerville for "God, widows and orphans," replies to the charge that she has severely punished the children under her care.

KELLY SPURNED BY FANNIE SID--

Does any girlie here want Kelly?
One girl says, "Yes! I."
She writes him a note signed "Fannie Sid——"

$5,000 will buy.

There is one girl at least who won't give $5,000 to marry Harlan Kelly of Boston and pay for his education. She sends Harlan a valentine refusal.

She lives in North Scituate, and in a letter to the AMERICAN she signs herself "Fannie Sid——."

"Fannie Sid——" enclosed a valentine letter to Kelly in her letter to the AMERICAN. In her letter to Kelly she writes that girls nowadays do not have to buy husbands or pay $5,000 for their education. She advises Kelly to "forget it."

Harlan Kelly is the young man who came to the AMERICAN office yesterday and announced his desire for a $5,000 wife thus:

"This is a sort of business scheme. You see," I'm flat broke. My parents would help me, but I'm independent, and I think I'd rather take help from my wife. If some girls with the $5,000 will write to me and inclose their pictures, and the assurance that they have the $5,000, everything will be all right."

To this proposition "Fannie Sid——," of North Scituate, writes Kelly thus:

North Scituate, Feb. 13.

Harlan Kelly:

Sir—I saw your advertisement in the AMERICAN for a wife with $5,000. Do you for one minute think that a poor girl would sacrifice $5,000 for you? You poor man! Girls nowadays do not have to buy husbands or pay $5,000 for their education before they get them. And not only do you ask for THAT LITTLE MITE, as you call it, but you want the poor girl to propose.

Say, Kelly, forget it. Nobody, I do hope, will ever have to pay $5,000 for a man without education. I don't a wife you want. It's only $5,000 thrown at you.

Well, Kelly, I sincerely hope you will get what you are looking for, but I doubt if any girl is that foolish.

LAUGHS CLEAR DEDHAM COURT

After several outbursts of laughter at testimony offered by Mrs. Ethel P. Norris of Wollaston, who is suing her husband for divorce in the Divorce Court at Dedham, Judge Fessenden, before whom the case was being tried, ordered the court cleared of spectators.

"This is not a vaudeville show," Judge Fessenden said. "This is a serious case."

Mrs. Norris and just testified that she had been taken to a concert one evening.

"Didn't that make you happy?" she was asked by Attorney G. W. Abele, counsel for Norris.

"Yes," she replied, "in a way, but the next day he came home drunk."

This reply brought forth from the spectators a loud outburst of laughter. It was then that Judge Fessenden ordered the courtroom cleared. Mrs. Norris is suing for divorce on the ground of cruel and abusive treatment and non-support.

MORSE AND WIFE SAIL FOR GENOA

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—Traveling under assumed names, Charles W. Morse, the ex-convict banker whose sentence was commuted by President Taft, and his wife, sailed for Europe on board the steamship Kaiserin Auguste Victoria today. They had secretly gone aboard the steamship last night and had hoped to leave the country without attracting any attention, but their plan was frustrated.

The former banker and his wife occupy the most expensive and luxurious suite on board the ship. It is on the sun deck, starboard side, and is known as suite No. 11, comprising a lounging room, bath room and bed chambers. The couple were down on the cabin list as Mr. and Mrs. N. B. Campbell.

Before the ship left her pier, Mrs. Morse received newspaper men, but begged that her husband be excused, saying that his physicians had warned him against being interviewed, as the excitement attending such an incident might prove harmful. Mrs. Morse looked very happy. She was dressed in a short walking suit and carried a huge bunch of orchids at her corsage. Despite the fact that Mr. Morse was supposed to be too ill to talk, a glimpse through the door of his suite disclosed him busily engaged in unpacking suit cases and trunks and preparing to make himself as comfortable as possible on the long voyage.

"We are going to Genoa first," said Mrs. Morse, when she was finally induced to discuss the trip. "Later we are going to Carlsbad, Germany. We had hoped to get away unobserved, as the doctors have repeatedly told my husband that his peace of mind must not be disturbed if he wants to recover his health.

"We who love him dearly want to see Mr. Morse a well man, physically and mentally, and we are willing to do anything we can to avoid having him worried by reporters. Our first lookout is to have my husband well again. I don't care what people say about him regaining his health rapidly. He cannot get well too fast to suit me."

The ship's officers were in the scheme to keep the news of Morse's sailing secret, and even after Mrs. Morse had been interviewed it was denied by officials of the vessel that the former ice king was on board.

KIMM FREE IN SHOOTING CASE

James P. Kimm, who shot James Patterson, proprietor of the Kenmore House at Nantasket, last month, is a free man today, having been acquitted in Plymouth Superior Court because of the strong fight he made on the ground that the shooting was in self-defense. The jury which exonerated Kimm from the charge of assault with intent to murder stood 11 to 1 for acquittal until after three hours' argument the twelfth man agreed with the majority.

District Attorney Albert S. Barker maintained that Kimm shot Patterson when the hotel man tried to stop a quarrel between his son and the assailant. Patterson was hit in the cheek with a charge from a small bore shot gun and barely escaped with his life.

Thomas H. Hartigan, Kimm's counsel, produced evidence to show that Kimm had given to Patterson a check for $1,450 to keep for him and that the quarrel began when Kimm asked for the money. Kimm said that Patterson chased him with a wrench-but Attorney Barker said, in spite of his life, he seized the shotgun and shot the hotel man.

COMMERCE SCHOOL'S ANNUAL CONCERT

The annual concert of the High School of Commerce musical association was held to-day at the school. The program was a varied one, including a march by Steele, a waltz by Strauss, a glee club selection, a dance number by the orchestra, some ukulele, a topical song and an overture by Keler Bela.

Face Paint Tabooed; Remove Skin Instead

"A few years ago only one class of women painted their faces," says Dolly Madison in Chicago News. "It was a sign of social ostracism and tabooed in refined circles. The custom has become so universal we must admit it is to be deplored and to be shelved as soon as possible."

How foolish to seek artificial "beauty" of that sort, obnoxious from artistic and moral standpoints, when it is so easy to obtain a truly natural complexion by the use of ordinary mercolized wax. An ounce of mercolized wax, obtainable at any drug-store, will cause such a transformation, no one need know by using anything else for the purpose. Applied like cold cream at night, and washed off in the morning, it at once begins to show the remarkable rejuvenating effects. It gently absorbs the lifeless surface skin in tiny particles, revealing the fresher, livelier, beautiful underskin. Naturally it takes with it all surface defects.

A Greek hero named Achilles was made invulnerable by his mother dipped the poor kid in the Styx.

But she didn't quite submerge him, as she held on here, etc.

So his heel alone was mortal; hence the fix.

His success was great in warfare, and in commerce all his foes succumbed.

Till an adversary stabbed him in the heel. Then he fell, and died, and went to Hades.

As his mortal part did not thrive on cold steel.

If Achilles had lived later, when the Holeproof Hosiery

Was in vogue, I'm sure we'd pipe a different lay.

Nothing could wear through his stockings, so as far as I can see

One old Grecian friend would be alive today.

MOTHERS SEEK WELFARE FUND

"We want two cents each from every mother in the United States—that's all," says Miss Julia Callahan, prime mover in the establishment of Parent-Teacher Associations, of Lynn. "Why? we want it in order to found at Washington a department of child welfare, similar to the department of agriculture, and with a building of its own. We hope to get subscriptions from enough women to give us a fund of $1,000,000 for this purpose."

Miss Callahan founded at Lynn, sixteen years ago, the first Parent-Teacher Association, from which has grown the present National Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher Associations, the Massachusetts branch of which holds its second annual convention at Lynn, on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week.

"These associations have two principal objects," adds Miss Callahan: "First, the promotion of child welfare in general, and, second, the passing of the Whitowed Mothers' Bill, which has just been submitted to Congress, where a commission has been appointed to look into the proposal and make a report on it.

Aid to Humanity.

"The passage of this bill, providing that aid be given by the government to widowed mothers who are unable to take proper care of their children, we regard as of first importance for, as the great spiritual teacher, Phillips Brooks, said: 'He who helps the child, helps humanity, with an immediateness that no help, given to any other human creature, at any other time, can possibly equal.'

"We feel deeply the misery consequent upon the present shifting of children in unfortunate families. Apparently the only relief that can now be given the mother who cannot make her little ones comfortable and happy is to separate them from her. And, pray, how much comfort does that bring to mother or to children?

"One or two examples will bring home my point.

"A mother in Lynn was left a widow with seven children. Having no means except such as she could provide by her own labor, she was unable to keep them all with her. So she sent one small boy whose name, James Murphy, she has given me permission to use, to her aunt in Revere. Only a few weeks ago, during the coldest of the cold weather in January, he became homesick and started on foot for Lynn, spending what little money he had for candy to relieve his hunger. Tiring toward night, he crept into a barn and slept there. When he woke in the morning both his feet were frozen so badly that they had to be amputated.

More Children in Homes.

"Now, the idea of our bill is to remedy such conditions as these; to have fewer children in institutions and more in the homes. The great mortality in institutions, and the fact that mothers will do, unpaid, what the State must pay someone else to do, has led philanthropists and politicians to agree that the best and cheapest way to board the dependent child is, if possible, with its mother.

"A small pension paid to the mother during the years when her children are too young to work may, under existing laws, insure the continuance of the home and give the mother a fair chance to take care of her children. In the case of widows with young children the usual choice has been between leaving them all day while the mother struggled to earn a livelihood, and the children were neglected and drifted into sickness and crime, or giving them up to the care of some institution which frequently bonded them out, at a cost per child of $10 a month, which is what it is estimated each dependent child costs the State at present.

Separation Double Evil.

"This separation has a double evil. Only a few years will pass and the mother might look to the children for strength to re-enforce her own, but with the family broken up, too often the institution takes her, too, at last. Separating families for poverty alone has economic shortcomings, as well as those of nature. Illinois has followed the example of Missouri, where the pension has been tried of $10 a month for the first child and $5 a month for each succeeding child, until the first child is fourteen years old, when its pension goes to the next child. Colonel Roosevelt, Mr. Brandeis, Jane Addams of Hull House, Chicago, and many prominent Catholic, Protestant and Jewish societies are in sympathy with this work."

The members of the Lynn associations are tireless, working day and night in their efforts to make it success of this week's convention in Lynn. The arrangements are in charge of an executive committee composed of Miss Callahan, Miss Bessie Ham and Mrs. Bert Smith of Somerville, a vice-president of the Massachusetts Congress of Mothers. This committee has appointed sub-committees, which are in charge severally of hotels, transportation, reception, hospitality, food, lodging and decoration. These committees are composed of members of the five Parent-Teacher Associations of Lynn, which were formed by and named after the five elementary schools. The associations are as follows:

Helping in Work.

The Myrtle, Mrs. A. C. Drury, president, and Miss Jelia Callahan, principal; the Chatham, Mrs. H. T. Rich, president, and Miss Pierce, principal; the Baltimore, Mrs. George H. Breed, president, and Miss Bessie Ham, principal; the West Neptune, Miss Anna Dillon, president and principal; and the Shepard, Dr. Currier, president, and Mr. Arthur Briggs, principal.

On Thursday afternoon a reception will be held for Mrs. Frederick Schoff of Philadelphia, president of the National Congress of Mothers, delegates and visitors. The receiving line will consist of the State officers, Superintendent Frank J. Peaslee and Assistant Superintendent Miss Flora Pope of the Lynn public schools, and the reception committee, headed by Miss Callahan. In the evening a meeting will be held at which Mayor Connery will welcome the visitors to the city, and Mrs. Merryman, president of the State Congress of Mothers, will make an address.

Business meetings will be held on Friday and Saturday.

On Friday, also, addresses will be made by Mrs. Anna Sturges Burgess of Boston, Miss Caroline Putnam Weeks of Bedford, and Mrs. Harry W. Kimball, field secretary of the Massachusetts Insurance League. Music will be provided by the Orpheus Quartet of Boston and by Mrs. Harriet Sterling Hemenway of Boston.

On Saturday there will be addresses by Mrs. Lewis R. Hovey of Bradford, a director of the State congress; Mrs. David O. Mears of Albany, vice-president of the national congress; Frank J. Prescott, superintendent of the Lynn schools, and the Rev. Frederic W. Perkins of Lynn.

PROTEGE QUITS HAWLEY HOUSE

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—Miss Margaret Cameron, the favored protege of Edwin Hawley, left the Hawley town house at No. 19 East Sixteenth street several days ago, after a caustic argument with Walter S. Crandell and William P. Hawley, executors of the financier's estate, over her claims to a share of his property had led to an open rupture.

She left no address, and the most recent developments in this remarkable case have been of such a disturbing character that the Hawley heirs started a rigorous search for Miss Cameron to resume negotiations with her. The woman, in a frank talk with an old friend, admitted that she had found no will which could be probated, but she said, and this statement is not denied by the other heirs, that she had in her possession papers signed by the financier which would make her free from financial worry for life.

MORRIS GEST'S WORD TO BOYS

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

"My message to the boys of Boston!

The clear, blue eyes of Morris Gest, who thirteen years ago was a newsboy in Boston, often with no place to sleep and nothing to eat, and is now lessee of the Manhattan Opera House, the manager and producer of fourteen other theatres in different parts of the United States, non-leader of David Belasco and managing director of Gertrude Hoffmann and the Imperial Russian Ballet which comes to Boston to appear at the Shubert Theatre next week, widened—the eyes, I mean—and grew moist and darker as he looked me through and through—and mothered me.

Then, as he quickly reviewed it, his answer was—"Concentration and sincerity."

"Success is something we all long for many have the courage to go after it, fight for it, suffer for it, while others sit at home and long for it to come to them. Which wins?

"The boys of Boston have 90 per cent a better chance of success than the boys of the other parts of the country. They are born into a different atmosphere and are honest—yes, honest, and that's what counts, too. In order to be successful a boy must be honest with himself and the whole world. He must be chosen in his desire to win.

Fight for Success.

"It's something a boy has to put into himself. He must desire success, he must think success and dream success and go out and fight for success, and in the end he'll reach his goal. It's all in going after it and going hard—going for all that's in him. The discomforts and deprivations of the present mean nothing to the boy who sees his ideal ahead, keeps him and always alluring, for that is his solace through everything. It's what he's going to attain, and what should he care about what he must suffer to that end.

"Sincerity—yes, you know the moment that Mr. Gest takes your hand in the firm magnetic clasp of welcome, looks straight into your eyes with his honest, compelling look, and says he's glad—you know he is glad, you know he's honest, and just as you know he's sincere, and just through the handshake and that look you get the secret of Morris Gest's success. His face is a face dominated by the spiritual, and dynamic—the artistic temperament is dominant.

He radiates honesty, sincerity, simplicity and art. The eyes, with their kaleidoscopic succession of emotions; the slender, well-shaped hands, with their long tapering fingers and the quick nervous movements of his body as in his sincerity he tries to impress one—all combine to mark this man the artist, the envy of hundreds who through their lack of sincerity and faith in themselves and their ability to stick tenaciously to the one idea are now still selling papers or tickets and doing the same hum-drum work at the same meager pittance, while he has passed on and now returns to their midst—a success.

"Can't Be Sort and Succeed."

"A boy can't be a sort and succeed—to go to the front is the big thing of all and only as those things of life will help him get there should he indulge in them.

"The best medicine for success is music—the best recreation for the boy who needs recreation is music. Twill grip them and help them on. Mr. Jorlin in giving Boston its opera house has done more than all the Carnegie libraries or Rockefeller's bread-lines could ever do.

"While it may not reach the lazy and satisfy their wants, as directly as the loaf of bread, it broadens the minds of those who have something to eat and something more than they need, makes them good and generous, takes them away from the sordid things of life and makes them want to do good for good's sake. This they do and the boy is helped over the rough places by the kindly hand, the kindly smile and the generous spirit which made him succeed.

"If the boy will fight till he wins his first success, they will be like wine to him and will inspire him to keep on winning and doing bigger and better things. There is no end to ambition when we have accomplished our first round. There is always still something higher up which from that angle is plainly seen and attracts, we strive for that and in the winning gain new courage and new force with which to go on—and on and on we go, always seeking and believing is the thing just beyond.

TURNER WEDS MISS WINTHROP

The marriage of Miss Mary E. Winthrop, formerly a Groton girl, who started her stage career in Boston, and Thomas Monroe Turner, organizer of the Cotton Duck Trust, which has been expected by friends of Miss Winthrop here, but rigorously denied by the couple, took place secretly three weeks ago, it became known today through allegations from New York.

Miss Winthrop left her home in Groton eleven years ago to take up her stage career, in Boston, her beauty made her a favorite, and her advent on Broadway created a sensation. Mr. Turner became interested in her, and finally announced that he had adopted her as his ward.

Turner is one of the J. Spencer Turner Company of No. 84 Worth street, New York. Miss Winthrop gained fame as an exhibitor of blooded dogs.

Since their wedding, which took place at Riverside, Ct., Mr. and Mrs. Turner have been living their country home at Shelter Island, N. Y. Neither will say anything about the wedding, and at their home at No. 57 Remsen street, Brooklyn, N. Y., a number of the nation was denied.

Mr. Turner is fifty-four years old and his bride is twenty-six. He has made two previous matrimonial ventures. His first wife was a Miss Barnes, daughter of a publisher, who obtained a divorce from him after a sensational trial. There were two sons by this marriage, who have been graduated from Yale.

SCHOOL GIRLS JOIN SPORT WAR

BROCKTON, Feb. 14.—The sport war at the High School between the School Board and the members of the various athletic teams and secret societies is spreading and today the girls at the school took a hand in the controversy. Members of the sororities and some who are not members indicated that before the end of the week there would be petitions in circulation pledging the signers to boycott all athletics in which High School or class teams take part.

The School Board rule prohibiting any fraternity member to take part in class or school activity affects the sororities, too, but the girls have no athletic teams and there will be no class honors to be sought for many months.

Another development was the lining up of the non-frat members with the School Committee. There are boys at the school who claim their inability to secure membership in the secret societies has resulted in their failure to be placed on some athletic team. They now see their opportunity, it is said, of "making" the teams.

Members of the School Committee say that before long action will be taken to force the fraternity members to resign from the clubs or leave the school.

KING OPENS PARLIAMENT

LONDON, Feb. 14.—Parliament convened to-day in a momentous session, with British statesmen brought face to face with measures of the greatest importance affecting the British empire in a decade.

The three principal questions up before the present session will be home rule, manhood suffrage and the disestablishment of the Welsh church.

To guard against a suffragette demonstration hundreds of police were on duty in Parliament square. The weather was fair and cold, and long before the hour for Parliament to be called to order hundreds of people were crowding into Parliament building and filling up the spectators' galleries which overlook the floor.

According to ancient custom, which has existed since the days of Guy Fawkes and the Gunpowder Plot, the yeomen of the guard in bright uniforms and carrying halberds, search the vaults below the chambers for explosives.

Report Asquith Will Quit.

Pressure from many and varied sources will be brought to bear upon members of Parliament when the various important bills are taken up for consideration. At a mass meeting of the Socialist Labor party last night resolutions were adopted demanding that the adult suffrage bill, which is to be introduced, be made to include women.

Parliament's opening was accompanied by a number of startling political rumors. One of these was to the effect that Premier Asquith is to be deposed after he has introduced the home rule bill. Chancellor David Lloyd-George and Foreign Minister Grey have been spoken of as Mr. Asquith's successor.

The event of capital interest attending the opening of Parliament was the speech from the throne. Although it was not expected that the King's address would contain any ultra-radical suggestions, nevertheless it was necessary for George V. to touch upon matters now up before the country which, a few years ago, would have been considered dangerous and socialistic.

King and Queen Cheered.

King George and Queen Mary drove to Parliament in the famous old royal coach through lines of cheering and enthusiastic subjects. The coach was driven by eight famous cream white horses from the royal stables and left Buckingham Palace at 1:30 o'clock. Their majesties had a detachment of life guards and yeomen of the guards as an escort, while other troops not participating the streets through which the royal procession passed.

The scene in the House of Peers was not up to its usual brilliancy owing to the fact that the court is in mourning for the Duke of Fife who died recently in Egypt. The peeresses were attired in black, the only relief being the white plumes in their head dress and their white veils. The Lords wore black hoods on their scarlet robes as insignia of mourning.

King George's speech was given by him first in the House of Lords and later was read in the House of Commons.

King George read the address in a firm, clear voice. Addressing the peers, he said:

Foreign Relations Friendly.

"My lords and gentlemen, my relations with the foreign powers continue friendly. The state of war between Italy and Turkey unfortunately still exists, but my government is ready, whenever the time is favorable and the opportunity presents itself, to become associated with the other powers in any mediation that may help."

"The situation in Persia engages the serious attention of the ministers who are in constant communication with the Persian government as to the best means of enabling the Persian government to reestablish tranquility throughout that country. Measures will soon be laid before Parliament in connection with Persian affairs, and I trust that a settlement of the nation will soon be satisfactorily terminated by the establishment of a stable and just government."

"In conformity with the views of the Chinese people my government continues to observe an attitude of strict non-intervention there, while taking all the necessary steps to protect British life and property. I fully recognize that the leaders on both sides in China have shown every desire to safeguard the lives and interests of foreign residents in the Chinese empire."

Outlining the demand for legislation, the King said: "Measures for better government in Ireland, the future government of the Welsh Church and amendment of the franchise law will be submitted to Parliament."

Don't Let Skin and Hair Show Your Age

(Stella Morton in Woman's Journal.)

"Don't look old until you have to. A clear, soft complexion makes any woman look younger than she is. To preserve your complexion, use powders and creams sparingly, if at all. In the morning, rub the face, neck and arms gently with a little cream, and dissolve a small original package of mayatone in half a pint of witch hazel. It won't harm the most delicate skin, but it gives a dainty natural color that is most attractive.

"If any treatment will make hair grow, dry shampooing with therox will. Just put a cupful of cornmeal in a fruit jar, mix in well an original package of therox, sprinkle a little of the mixture on the head once a week, and brush out thoroughly. It makes the hair clean, soft, silky and lustrous—and easy to do up.

"Aches and pains make a woman look old. To stop ache in back or joints, to reduce swellings, to allay inflammation, to relieve pain from any strain, bruise or any cause, apply Mother's Salve, rubbing in well. It is easy to use and quick to act."

12-HOUR STEEL DAY DEFENDED

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—Percival Roberts, Jr., director of the United States Steel Corporation, presented the corporation's side of the labor question today before the Stanley Steel Committee. Roberts was summoned at the request of Attorney D. A. Reed, after John A. Fitzsimons, Miss Harrison and Margaret Byington had given evidence as to the conditions under which the employes in steel mills and coal camps live.

Roberts began his statement by demanding proof that the Steel Corporation has not done more to ameliorate the condition of mill men than has been done in the iron and steel trade during the earlier nineteenth century. He defended the policies of the corporation and called attention to the fact there is a distinction to be made between the policies of the corporation and their execution at different plants.

Concerning twelve-hour-a-day labor, he said there practically are no workmen in the Mast Furnace to do the labor at least one day off each week. He declared the twelve-hour day to be a matter more of convenience than of necessity; and that the men prefer to work a day or a night trick of twelve hours instead of eight-hour shifts.

RECORD CATCH ON ARETHUSA

All records for two days' fishing were broken at "T" wharf today when the Arethusa, Captain Clayton Murray, for a long time the "high liner" of the Gloucester cod fishing fleet, came in with a 80,000 catch. The twenty-two men on the Arethusa hauled in fish running at one-half ton each of the vessel and, receiving $115 each as their share of the haul, they proceeded to celebrate.

The trip lasted twelve days, but the weather was such that there were but five days of fishing. When the Arethusa made her first to the wharf today there were in her hold 80,000 pounds of cod, 10,000 pounds of pollock, 4,000 pounds of haddock, and 60,000 pounds of halibut. Evils in City.

Editor AMERICAN:

The country boy has advantages to help him grow in a successful, honest gentleman. The city boy has the better schools to attend, but there are too many evils on the way. The country boy may have to work all day, but he may study through the long evenings if so inclined. Abraham Lincoln, for instance, how did he get his education? By hard work and study.

'PEOPLE MUST RULE NATION'

Several prominent Boston men have given their views in reply to President Taft's speech in which he declared that "all people are not fitted for popular government," and contrast his statement with the words of Lincoln. Their statements follow:

By LOUIS D. BRANDEIS.

Unquestionably this country belongs to the people who inhabit it. Some of the people may be less fitted for self government than others, but it is clear that there are no people who govern others except with the consent of those others. America's duty, therefore, is so to develop its institutions that all of its people will be capable of self government.

By WILLIAM A. GASTON.

There can be little doubt as to what a Democrat thinks. We agree with everything Lincoln said. As to Mr. Taft's statement—well, it is inconsistent with Lincoln.

By DANIEL J. KILEY.

The quotation from Lincoln is the statement of the true statesman and the patriot who put into practise in every day life and in his administration of public office the fact that this is a government of the people, for the people and by the people.

By JOSEPH A. CONRY.

Lincoln's is the soundest language that has ever been used by a statesman since the Declaration of Independence was adopted from the pen of Thomas Jefferson. As therein laid down, we hold these truths to be self evident, that all men are equally entitled in its broadest sense. Lincoln spoke for the mankind of the country.

By JAMES H. VAHEY.

I certainly do not agree with President Taft, and I certainly do most heartily agree with President Lincoln. The worship of Lincoln is perhaps almost a fetish with me, in spite of the fact that he was a Republican and I am a Democrat. I unhesitatingly and unqualifiedly agree with Mr. Lincoln's views of our government and institutions, and I disagree absolutely with President Taft. There is no aristocracy of intellect in this country, and there should be no aristocracy of wealth.

By REV. JOHN CHARLES F. DOLE.
President Twentieth Century Club.

The difference of view between President Taft and Abraham Lincoln will be seen by a comparison of the words of Lincoln, viz. that no man is good enough to govern another man without the other's consent. This is the essence of Democracy, which Mr. Taft seems to deny.

WHEN "APARTMENTS" ARE NOT TENEMENTS

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 14.—When is an apartment house not a tenement? The Court of Appeals answers this question by declaring in substance:

"When it's an eight-story building in which some of the apartments rent for $1,000 and $1,500 annually."

The court further decided that an apartment house is not a tenement house when it has separate bath tubs, and separate rooms, or kitchens, presumably for preparing and cooking meals.

"In general sense," avers the Court, "these apartments may be considered in a restricted sense as designed for sleeping, living or any other purpose."

PLAYS ROLE OF ST. VALENTINE

Alexander I. Peckham, lawyer, Judge of the Newsboys' Court, and friend of the children of the South End, today played the role of St. Valentine to almost 5,000 children of that section of the city.

Until late in the evening Mr. Peckham distributed valentines to the poor children of the South End, ranging in ages from seven to fourteen years.

Mr. Peckham made dozens of trips between the Newsboys' Club on Tremont street, which he made his headquarters and where the precious valentines were stored, and the streets of the South End.

Everywhere there were children—in the streets, in the clubs, in the settlement houses, in their homes—Mr. Peckham went with his valentines. And everywhere little suites of humanity stretched out eager hands and tightly clutched the pretty bits of pasteboard that brought home to them the joy of Valentine Day.

Everywhere he went, Mr. Peckham was surrounded by groups of children of all ages, of all sizes, many of them ragged and ill-clad but all eagerly clamoring for valentines.

This is the tenth year that he has distributed valentines on Valentine Day. The children in the South End, most of whom Peckham knows personally and by name, have come to expect him on that day.

The 5,000 hand-painted valentines distributed by Mr. Peckham all but about 100 found their way into the hands of girls.

RACES STREETS CLAD LIKE ADAM

A young man who gave his name as Juda Solomanick of No. 52 Carver street, was found by Patrolman Frank Haggerty and Micheal Trayers of the Court square station running along Tremont street late Sunday night, early today. Solomanick was not hindered by even a vestige of clothing.

The policemen planted themselves in his path and interrupted his rhapsody with nature by throwing a coat over his manly shoulders. It was too cold to interview the stranger on the street so he was taken to the station house. On the way Haggerty fell into wondering whether one of the I. street brownies had wandered off his path.

At the stationhouse he of no clothes, when asked what his name was, wrote on a slip of paper, "Koernig Solomon, No. 52 Carver street, Boston." His skin was a riot of color and his teeth chattered as he mumbled answers in broken English to Lieutenant Allen's questions. He told the lieutenant he was born in Holland, and came to Boston about nine months ago.

He declared he was employed as a cigar maker in a factory on Endicott street, North End. An incoherent jumble of words was the only answer the police could receive to their questions regarding his appearance on the streets without the accompanying sorcery required by law.

NEW GREETINGS TO GRAND TRUNK

Worcester and Revere have joined in the hearty welcome to the Grand Trunk Railway given by the Massachusetts cities. The directors of the Merchants' Association in Worcester have unanimously adopted resolutions indorsing the application of the Grand Trunk for leave to enter Worcester with a branch of the main line now in course of construction toward Providence and tidewater. The Revere Board of Trade has done likewise, respecting the entire Grand Trunk project.

It is believed by the directors of the Worcester association that the entrance of the Grand Trunk into that city would mean keener competition among the railroads in freight rates as well as better all-around traveling facilities for the general public.

The merchants and manufacturers of that city are very large shippers, both to tidewater and to points in the North and Northwest, and the building of the Grand Trunk there would mean a great saving in the cost of transportation.

Five large construction companies have announced their intention to bid for the work of building the line between Worcester and Palmer. There are six sections in the proposed line, three of which are in Massachusetts and the others in Rhode Island.

Tells Exit Line Plans.

Here are the resolutions adopted by the Worcester Merchants' Association:

"Resolved, that the Worcester Merchants' Association heartily and as a unit indorses the application of the Southern New England for Grand Trunk Railway for a charter to extend its lines into the city of Worcester, believing the same to be in the interest of increasing the commercial prosperity of our city, and authorizes the association to be represented before the Legislature advocating the granting of the charter, and that the members of the association should do everything in their power to see that the charter is granted."

The announcement that a belt line embracing all of the cities and towns North of Boston and giving these places direct communication with the through lines for the West, is planned by the Grand Trunk, and the suggestion that the thousand acres of marsh land in Revere between Revere and Lynn, be used for yards and shops by the new road, featured the banquet of the Revere Board of Trade where Jacob Warman, General Assistant of the Grand Trunk, was the principal guest.

Mr. Warman officially announced the belt line plans. The suggestion as to the yards was made by ex-Harbor and Land Commissioner Henry J. T. Skelton, who pointed out that there is no place within fifteen miles of Boston which could be so well put to this use as the Revere marshes.

Grand Trunk in New Hampshire.

"I am glad to know," Mr. Warman said, "that the Boston & Eastern is to a position at this time to announce that it will be ready to begin the actual work of construction shortly after its incorporation.

"The steam railroads are not anxious for the suburban passenger business. It is not profitable, and I know that the relations between the Grand Trunk and the Boston and Eastern would be of a most friendly nature in the event of our coming through this section beside them.

"Today articles of incorporation of the Southern New England Railroad, the interstate New England extension of the Grand Trunk system, were filed with the Secretary of State at Concord, N. H. The company indicates that it will cross from Vermont at Lebanon, and passing through Grafton, Merrimac and Sullivan counties, reach Concord, and thence down the Merrimac river to the Massachusetts line.

Part of New System.

"The New Hampshire line is a part of the proposed extension from White River, Vt., to Boston, and now we are in all of the New England States.

"The coming of the Grand Trunk into the port of Boston will mean, we believe, prosperity to not only Boston, not only to the cities and towns outside of Boston, but also to New England.

"It is not the intention of our road to run a direct line only into Boston, but we intend to have a great belt line, similar to the belt line of over one hundred miles outside of Chicago. This would embrace many of the cities and towns North of Boston and would make the main lines to the West, and other parts of the country accessible to the manufacturers and industries in these places."

Mr. Warman made a hit when he declaimed the following poetic gem:

If all our planes were aeroplanes
Sweeping the carrier skies,
"Mel" Adams might sidetrack his trains
And put on wings and fly.
In many ways, in many things,
God's wisdom He reveals
To some men He hath given wings;
"Mel" and I have wheels.

Dr. D. D. Scannell and His Bride Leaving Church To-day

Miss Elizabeth A. MacDonald's marriage to Dr. Scannell today is the culmination of a romance which began when the physician was treating patients at Boothby Hospital, where the bride was head nurse.

DR. SCANNELL MARRIES NURSE

Dr. David D. Scannell of No. 566 Commonwealth avenue, one of the leading Boston surgeons, and Miss Elizabeth A. MacDonald, formerly superintendent of the Boothby Surgical Hospital, were married at 8:30 today in the Church of Our Lady of Lourdes on Brookside avenue, Jamaica Plain. The marriage is the result of a romance which began when Dr. Scannell met Miss Macdonald in the course of professional visits to Boothby Hospital. Miss Macdonald was then head nurse.

The wedding was private, a dozen immediate relatives attending. The nuptial mass was celebrated by the Rev. George A. Lyons, pastor of the church.

The couple was attended by Miss Mollie V. Sullivan and John D. Sullivan, niece and nephew of Dr. Scannell.

The bride wore a light blue travelling suit and blue plumed hat. She carried a bouquet of Killarney roses.

There was a wedding breakfast at No. 52 Peter Parley road, where Dr. and Mrs. Scannell will reside. They will be home after a week's honeymoon.

Dr. Scannell is a former member of the School Board, an instructor of anatomy and surgery in the Harvard Medical School, visiting surgeon at the Boston City Hospital, and last year resigned his position on the faculty of Tufts College.

His bride is of Scotch parentage, and came to Boston from a Canadian province. She was graduated from the Nurses' Training School at the City Hospital and studied at the Lying-in Hospital.

A New Remedy for Skin Troubles.

Many skin troubles are not caused by the blood, as most people think. External treatment is therefore the most direct and rational way to effect a cure. A chemist who was convinced of this fact found that an extract of the plant Juniperus Oxycedrus was most soothing and healing to an irritated, inflamed or diseased skin. By a special method of treatment this vegetable extract is now combined with other antiseptic, healing ingredients, and is known as Cadum. This new compound has cured thousands of cases of eczema and other distressing skin diseases after other remedies had failed. It stops the terrible itching of eczema at once, and begins healing with the first application. Cadum can be used with confidence in all skin affections of infants and adults. It has proved a blessing to many who have suffered for years from tormenting and disfiguring skin diseases. Cadum is different from anything else. It acts quickly upon pimples, sores, ulcers, eruptions, rashes, rough skin, blotches, chafings, scalp sores, itching piles, etc. Sold by all druggists at 10c and 25c per box.

OPERA LOVERS TEST IN TOSCA

It was Mme. Lucille Marcel's voice that first sung Puccini's music at the Theatre Royal Opera in Vienna, and it was Felix Weingartner who made it popular.

Tonight at the Boston Opera House the audience will have an opportunity to hear and judge both Mme. Marcel and Mr. Weingartner, the one in the principal role of "Tosca," the other as the conductor, a combination that seems in itself a musical event of the first magnitude.

"Puccini's operas were unknown to the Vienna Hofoper before my advent," says Mr. Weingartner. "Was it the cause of lack of appreciation or low artistic judgment, the fact remains that while open to other Italian masters, the Vienna opera house was closed to Puccini.

"I am not only thorough cosmopolitan in music, I am also what may be defined as anti-tendencious. I worship at the shrine of Mozart and Beethoven, but also do I bow to the genius of Wagner. I admire Rossini and Verdi, but I also have the deepest admiration for Gounod and Bizet.

"Consequently it is not to be wondered at that Puccini scores, full as they are of melodious imagination, that awakened first my interest and then genuine admiration.

Happy Over Boston Praise.

"The question to be settled before producing any of Puccini's operas in Vienna was to find singers whose voices could be adequate to the demands made upon them by his music.

"The present-day German singers have discarded to a degree the art of singing for that of declamation, although there are hopeful signs of a return to the old ideals, as, for instance, Mr. Urlus proves.

"It was not until Mme. Marcel became a member of the Vienna Royal Opera that I saw a possibility of presenting a Tosca who could live in song the tragedy of her life. Whether I have chosen well or not the Boston opera-goers will have an opportunity to judge tonight.

"What, do not expect some radical and startling departure in my reading of 'Tosca score'? I will endeavor, as I always do, to carry out the composer's ideas, and to him the orchestra, more or less subservient to the vocal and dramatic side of the opera.

"I am still overwhelmed by the praise heaped upon me for 'Tristan und Isolde,' and I confess that Bostonians have established a new goal for which I shall always have to aim. Am I pleased? I am happy, just happy."

New Rule for Marcoux.

"Tosca was a woman of elementary passion, a woman quick to love, quick to hate, ready for self-sacrifice and for vengeance alike. A primitive creature in many respects, but with a soul as white as snow," says Mme. Marcel.

"Tosca was neither a scheming courtesan nor a vulgar street slinger. Before and above everything else she was a woman of the heart—impulsive, superstitious, but true blue to the core.

"That much for the dramatic side of the character, as for the vocal side I studied and prepared the role with Mr. Weingartner, and I hope to do him justice.

"The others in the cast tonight will be Zenatello as Cavaradossi, and Vanni Marcoux as Scarpia. Scarpia, as depicted by Marcoux, is different in characterization of the Roman chief of police as yet seen on the stage of the Boston Opera House.

"This will be the only appearance of M. Marcoux in this role this season, although he has got to add to be one of the best, if not the best, in his repertoire.

"Those present at the rehearsal of 'Tosca' at the Boston Opera House saw the witnesses of the most unusual ovation ever received by any artist for at the end of the second act everybody including the members of the chorus and stage hands cheered and clapped hands in honor of Mme. Marcel and Vanni Marcoux.

'GOLD COASTERS' HAVE FIRE SQUAD

No more, when the dread cry of "fire" rings through the streets, will the good citizens of Cambridge quake in their beds and flaten, breathless, while the hoofs of the fire horses pound past. No more will every alarm and every clanging bell send a thrill of terror into the hearts of dwellers in the University City.

For now the Harvard "Gold Coasters" have organized a volunteer fire department, and will assist the firemen when the need of their services arises.

Tiring of the monotony of college life and the eternal sameness of recitation after recitation, a dozen or more of the scions of wealth and aristocracy who dwell in the expensive Mt. Auburn street dormitories, and, incidentally, study in the college, have organized a fire fighters' brigade.

JUDGES OUT OF BRANDT'S CASE

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—Declaring that acceptance was barred by the State constitution, Supreme Court Justice Gerard today declined the appointment of special commissioner to investigate the merits of the case of Foulke E. Brandt, former valet for Mortimer L. Schiff, who was sentenced to prison for thirty years for the theft of two stickpins. Justice Gerard declared that the clause of the constitution forbidding a justice from holding any office prevented acceptance.

Judge Rosalsky, before whom arguments were made yesterday for a reopening of the Brandt case, announced that all proceedings before him are indefinitely discontinued. Judge Rosalsky's statement followed opinions of able lawyers that Brandt is at present a prisoner of Supreme Court Justice Gerard, and that he would not be good form for him to take action which might interfere with the case before the Supreme Court justice.

Brandt, who was a servant in the home of Banker M. Schiff, was brought to New York on a writ of habeas corpus.

He was taken before Justice Gerard in the Supreme Court where decision on his writ was reserved and then lodged in the Tombs, where he will remain under the custody of the Supreme Court until a decision is handed down.

Another feature of this case was taken up by Judge Rosalsky in General Sessions. Judge Rosalsky who imposed the thirty-year sentence on Brandt, granted a motion to set aside the former plea of guilty, but because of the previous action of Justice Gerard the lawyers in the case believes the action in General Sessions will not have any effect.

Meanwhile, on the suggestion of Attorney-General Carmody, Governor Dix reopened the case and appointed Justice Gerard a special commissioner to hear Brandt's plea for executive clemency, which was denied at first, directing Justice Gerard to report his findings to the Governor.

District Attorney Whitman stated that, apart entirely from any other proceeding in behalf of or in connection with Brandt's case, he would proceed today with a Grand Jury investigation of the indictment.

Investigation of the files at headquarters disclosed evidence which will be placed before the Grand Jury, in the shape of letters written to Inspector McLaughlin, at that time at the head of the Detective Bureau.

Alton B. Parker, in the proceeding before Judge Rosalsky, read into the record of the case a letter to him from Mortimer L. Schiff in which the banker stated that Brandt wrote an insulting letter to his wife and that he, Mr. Schiff, was now prepared publicly to vindicate his honor and that of his wife.

Minahan L. Towns, Brandt's counsel, called attention to the fact that Governor Dix in a public statement since his election about Brandt was recently revived, has insisted that there was no mystery in the case, a point which Mr. Towns believes will be opposed by the statement in the Schiff letter read in court by Mr. Parker.

As it stands now, Brandt may be released by a decision of Justice Gerard immediately granting absolutely the writ of habeas corpus. But there is little also to be a denial of his writ which would send him back to prison to complete his sentence, or a re-habilitation of his case which would send him to the bar again as a prisoner under indictment who had not yet pleaded to the indictment.

ADMIT ARIZONA AS 48TH STATE

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 14.—President Taft signed the proclamation admitting Arizona as the forty-eighth State in the Union at 10 o'clock today.

For the first time in the history of the White House permission to take moving pictures there had been granted. Three machines were in operation. Two of these were operated by government employes for an official photographic record of the event. The third machine belonged to a commercial concern and was permitted to photograph the President while he affixed his signature to the proclamation.

BIG TRUCK SHOW FOR BROCKTON

By J. C. KERRISON.

When it comes to being up-to-date, progressive and initiative, the Brockton Automobile Dealers' Association demands consideration. Last week this organization conducted an automobile show, and in point of success it surpassed even the fondest hopes of its sponsors, the dealers transacting a large amount of business.

Not to be outdone, however, by the so-called national shows held in the larger cities throughout the country, the association will open its truck show tomorrow in the Palace Rink and will continue through the rest of the week. A fine array of commercial vehicles will be shown.

A feature of this show will be a display of aeroplanes by the Eastern Aviation Company of Brockton, and the association has arranged that "Pop" Miller will fly each day of the show.

Percy Owen of the Chilmeco Company arrived in town yesterday as the guest of E. A. Gilmore of the Whitten-Gilmore Company, distributors of the Chilmeco cars in this section.

Mr. Owen has just returned from the Chicago Auto Show, which, he says, is the one of the best shows that has yet been held in this country, not only from a spectacular but likewise from a sales point of view, the actual business there having surpassed all previous records, which is saying considerable when one remembers the great success of the show of a year ago.

Mr. Owen says that so far as he can ascertain the great majority of manufacturers and designers will visit the Boston show next month, which alone is always looked upon as one of the best of the year.

The annual ball of the Massachusetts Automobile Operators' Association was held last evening at Paul Revere Hall and was largely attended. Many distinguished State and city officials were present as guests, as well as the celebrities of the motor world.

SERGEANT M'GARR OF SOMERVILLE IS 75

Follies Sergeant Edward McGarr of the Somerville force, father of Captain John R. McGarr of the Boston police department, observed his seventy-fifth birthday, attending to his usual duties at the desk in the Somerville police station. Sergeant McGarr, who has been a member of the department for forty-one years, is the oldest man in point of age on the Somerville force, but he is outstripped in the length of service by Captain Perry, who recently entered upon his forty-fifth year as a member of the department.

SPEAKING OF HASH, the greatest living French chef, A. Escoffier has prepared for the Sunday AMERICAN a decidedly interesting article called "Delightful Ways of Making Hash." The preparation of appetizing beef hash, M. Escoffier calls this dish, is one of good, economical French cooking."

BROOKLINE AIRSHIP EXPERT WILL SPEAK

Albert Adams Merrill of Brookline, founder of the Boston Aeronautical Society, who has been experimenting with heavier-than-air machines for fifteen years, will be the principal speaker at the Worcester Board of Trade smoker to be held in the organization's hall tomorrow evening.

NEW STAR AFTER BOWLING PRIZE

Joe Spillane, every bowler in Greater Boston knows Joe, has rolled his five strings in the preliminary or qualifying round in the Boston AMERICAN Bowling Championship Contest, and his card, duly signed by Don F. Marthes, manager of the Casino alleys, and two witnesses, has been received by the Bowling Editor.

In talking with the Bowling Editor the night of the Christopher-Puebler match in Boston, Spillane declared that nothing would please him better than to get in the final, or even the semi-finals, with the cracks like Christopher, Archie Walsh, Peebler, Galway, etc., just to see what he could do when placed under the guns.

It was easily seen that he had plenty of confidence in his ability to hold up his end with the best of 'em, the wisecracks. Possibly Joe's wish may come true. This will be determined when the final reckoning is made after the close of the preliminary, which is set for Wednesday, February 21.

A Couple of Live Wires.

Another of the headliners in candlepin bowling who has bowled his five consecutive strings is Walter Kirk of the Murray & Irwin alleys. With the card came a very pleasing letter from Mish Murray. Murray and Kirk are certainly live wires in the bowling sport, having advanced ideas in boosting the game with the general public as well as the participants.

Long is the frightened cuss in having your card forwarded to the AMERICAN by the proper owner or manager of the score is not a record breaker. There will be quite a number eligible to the elimination round, which follows the preliminary, and it is possible the final bowler may take it for granted that his filled-out card is received by the Bowling Editor.

The more cards received means more bowlers in the eliminations, so it is for the interest of all entrants in having their scores placed on record in the lucky-card list of the contest.

And kindly rush along the cards to help the Bowling Editor in finding as quickly as possible the eligibles for the elimination. With the last roll on February 21 it is hoped to have this list published the following Sunday.

Bowlers must remember that after having rolled their five consecutive strings that is all in the preliminary. The highest pinfall will win the final, which will be five twenty strings, ten strings rolled on consecutive nights.

Entrants to the contest have the right to bowl their five strings over any one of the alleys named in the following official list:

MALDEN CLUB WILL HOLD BOXING BOUTS

The Commercial A. A. of Malden is looking for larger quarters as a result of the large outpouring of the members of the club who are anxious to attend the series of bouts which the association is to conduct in the near future. The club at its opening show had nearly 500 members in the hall, and the bouts were conducted in a clever manner. Two decisions are given at the club, and many members have made proposals for joining the organization. Young Clancy of Newton and Dave Powers of Malden were the principals at the opening show, and were very evenly matched. Three preliminaries were also on the program, and all were evenly contested.

TROTTING RULES MAY BE CHANGED TO-DAY

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—Changes in the rules governing trotting meets on the American turf will result from the biennial congress of the National Trotting Association scheduled to convene in the Murray Hill Hotel this afternoon. One of the most important changes is a rule to do away with hobbles on pacers.

CHAUNCY OUT TO BREAK TIE

Much depends on the result or tonight's matches in the City League. The fix which now exists for first place between the Murray & Irwin and Carruth teams will undoubtedly be broken and many of the City League "fans" look to see the Chaunce team do it.

Murray & Irwin should be able to take at least three and probably four from the Hayward team. It will not be a cinch, however, for Bob Pike's men to be shook and in put to pull an unexpected surprise on Mish's champs. The Murray men well realize the position which they are placed in and it is safe to say that they will jump at every pin in order to win.

The Murray rollers have not been putting up the standard of bowling which they are capable of, in the last few matches, but they, then, again, they have not been forced to. With all the men hitting the pins at their usual style the Murray "fans" will expect their teams to connect with at least seven wins.

Carruth, too, will have to roll better than it has been in the last few matches if it expects to win from Chauncy. Bill Hastie, the City Guideboard rooter, says that his team can do the trick when called upon, and it will be right in front and try his hardest to beat Chester Carruth's boys tonight.

The big crowd will journey to the Elite alleys, where the Boylston and Elite teams will clash. The match will be the feature one of the night as both teams are fighting hard for the league championship. Many of the "fans" are expecting to see Billy Ayerts' boys connect with three points.

Ellis has always been good on its return home and will certainly make the visiting team look to it. Still, with Jack Kerrigan the "sorrel-top" leader, going at his usual pace and the old crowd of Boylston rollers on hand with the Elite team, the Boylston five will have a good chance.

Adams Square should have an easy time in defeating the Metcalfe team as the latter is a comparative newcomer in the league. Tom's pets have not shown up very good in their last few matches and will have to step some to get a point from the Littlefield bunch.

BROWN TEAM PLAYS TECH FIVE TONIGHT

Brown should have no trouble in registering another win when they meet the Technology five in the Tech gymnasium tonight. Tech is very weak this year, and has not yet won a game. The Brown five has shown a lot of class since their rather poor showing in the Springfield Training School game, and won from Williams for the first time in four years. They have also won from New Hampshire State College and Rhode Island State, both of which have defeated the Tech team by decisive scores. The freshman and sophomore teams at M. I. T. will play the first game in the series in the class championship. The sophs have won from Salem and Bridgewater Normal, and from Andover, and expect to have an easy time defeating the lower classmen.

THREE HOCKEY STARS OUT.

The Harvard freshman hockey team, which plays Yale 1915 Sunday at New Haven, will probably be without the services of three of its best men. Captain Phillips, DeWindt and Baker are at present incapacitated from playing and indications will not be in the lineup Saturday.

AMERICAN MEN OPEN SESSION

CHICAGO, Feb. 14.—American League magnates met to-day to adopt their schedule for 1912. The actual adoption of the schedule was not expected to take more than ten minutes, but Ban Johnson, who believes baseball magnates should work occasionally, had much other labor on slight for the ball team owners, and the meeting was scheduled to last several hours. The league will ratify the new National agreement by which the minors were reclassified.

There was a lot of trading talk in the air during the early hours to-day. Colonel S. L. Hedges of St. Louis and his manager, Bobby Wallace, made the biggest showing long the advance guard. Wallace and left-handed pitchers and does not know at to do with all of them.

From Cleveland came the secretary of ...rland. Apparently the Naps are still trying to dispose of George Stovall and are hoping to land a good left fielder. Doubtless they will approach Manager Callahan of the White Sox while the idea of swapping Stovall for Seidel, but the Sox Boss says a trade will not be made.

President McAleer, Manager Jake Stahl and Bill Carrigan were all in the meeting, representing the Boston Red Sox, and they have a hard working day. President McAleer was a busy individual, as this was the first meeting he has attended as a magnate and he was careful that everything he did was right.

The Red Sox boss came on to Chicago with more than one object in view. After the meeting he will go into conference with Manager Jake Stahl and then the entire roster will be gone over and complete arrangements for the Southern spring trip will be made. Although Stahl was met with the Red Sox boss he is said to be known pretty well who's who on the team, and it is expected that several important things will be settled.

President McAleer was not around looking for deals, but he was open to propositions with other magnates and conferred with Stahl on players that were offered up by the other baseball men. The Red Sox would pick up any likely player, but they would not trade any of their stars.

After the meeting is over Manager Jake Stahl and Catcher Bill Carrigan will leave for the South, to get in shape before the other members of the team arrive. Stahl looks very healthy and is but a few pounds overweight, and he should work that off before the main squad arrives at Hot Springs. It is now the plan for the two players to leave next Tuesday for Hot Springs.

QUINCY FAVORITE OVER ST. JOSEPH'S

The St. Joseph's of the West End will go after first place in the Greater Boston league to-night when it meets the Quincy five at the south end boys' room on Washington street. A win for the West End boys will put them in the lead for first place, but it will make the margin between the two teams much smaller. The Quincy team will come up from its home town a favorite for the West End "fans" are confident that it will go back defeated. The game should be a close and interesting one. Nearly a hundred fellows of the Quincy team will come up from the Granite city to cheer them on.

FAVOR PACKEY OVER MURPHY

By JACK CONWAY.

Eddie Murphy, the best lightweight developed in New England in many years, will realize one of the greatest ambitions of his life when he clashes with Packey McFarland of Chicago in a ten-round bout at South Bend, Indiana, to-night. For two long years Murphy has been waging a verbal war with the Windy City whirlwind. The men have been matched on several occasions, but something has always happened to prevent the bout taking place.

Packey is a 10 to 7 favorite in betting circles. The men will weigh in at 136 pounds at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Western fight "fans" believe that McFarland's wonderful shift and dazzling footwork will prove too big a handicap for the South Boston boy to overcome. McFarland has been in the ring for eight years and has yet to meet his master.

Packey has a world-wide reputation. On the other hand, Eddie is not very well known in some parts of this country. He has fought most of his battles in New England. Murphy is twenty-two years of age and has been boxing for the past five years. In this time he has engaged in forty-two contests and his colors have yet to be lowered in defeat.

Packey Wonderful Boxer.

McFarland owes his success in the squared circle to his ability as a boxer. Packey has very seldom won his bouts by sending some one a K. O. punch.

McFarland is very shifty when in action. He keeps bringing his arms up and down like a two-year-old, jabbing for all he is worth with his left. In this way he usually manages to run up a big lead.

When Packey's opponent tends the steadyard boy either cleverly ducks or side steps. By following these tactics he makes an awkward slugger look foolish.

Eddie says that he doesn't intend to start after McFarland, hammer and pound. Instead he plans to box him and finally coax him into resting. When McFarland leads the Peninsular pride will open up and hammer away for dear life with rights and lefts.

McFarland has won a large number of his battles by using the left jab overtime. In Murphy, however, he will meet a boxer who possesses a wonderful left hand. There are few men in the game who have a better left hand than Murphy. His left shoots out like a piston, and when it lands there is a loud thud.

Murphy Hard Puncher.

Murphy holds his right in reserve and when the latter lands with his right it hurts. Many aspirants for ring honors have been sent down for the count by Murphy's right.

The ten round route gives McFarland a big advantage. His cleverness may be able to keep Eddie at bay for the greater part of time. If Eddie is returned the winner or gets a draw he will probably go to the coast where he has been promised a good match. If he is defeated, he will not be disgraced as there are few men who have anything on McFarland in a short bout.

WOMEN SKATERS IN TITLE RACE

A series of skating races for the women's championship of the world will be held in Cleveland on February 23 and 24 between Miss Marguerite Graham of Ludlow and Miss Rolina Leonard of Cleveland. The women will skate a quarter of a mile on the first day and a half mile on the second day and the winner will be declared the champion.

Miss Graham is one of the best women skaters in the East. She has appeared in several races and has always proved to be able to win over the Cleveland lady. Miss Leonard has been racing on skates since 1904 and has several titles annexed. She has appeared in several races this season and has made good time.

She has much speed and good endurance, and her many friends in this State are confident that she will be able to win her first championship title of the year.

ORANGE BOY LEAVES TO JOIN ATHLETICS

ORANGE, Feb. 14.—Roland A. Chase left here to-day to join Connie Mack of the Athletics at Philadelphia. Chase is a senior at the local high school, and is one of the best high school baseball players ever developed. His work at first base last year attracted several scouts, and he was signed to play with the Athletics. He will go South with the team next Monday and will be given a good tryout. He is but 18 years old, but is tall and husky. Chase was presented with a gold watch fob by his friends at a reception and banquet tendered him.

MAT EXPERTS PICK ORDEMAN

Henry Ordeman of Minneapolis, the American champion heavyweight wrestler, is so well thought of in the West that the mat experts of that sections figure that he has a splendid chance to down Zbyszko when they come together next Monday night in Boston. They point to the fact that in the draw between Zbyszko and Ordeman at Detroit that the latter had all the better of the going for the last thirty minutes, and that Zbyszko was on the defensive most of that time. Then, too, they point to the fact that it took Hackenschmidt at his best 2 hours and 47 minutes to score a single fall on the Norseman.

Besides this Ordeman has beaten every American wrestler of note, including Fred Beell, who defeated Getch, and who held the championship of the world for a few weeks.

Zbyszko's win over Raleveich gives him the undisputed title of champion of all Europe, thus making the coming match one in which the titles of both Europe and America are involved, something which is no near a world's championship as can possibly be.

WORCESTER OBJECTS TO THREE CREWS

SPRINGFIELD, Feb. 14.—Manager Roderick Gerrish of the local high school crew, received a letter from the manager of the Worcester High School crew to-day objecting to a three-cornered race between the crews of Boston, Springfield and Worcester. The Worcester manager does not give any reason for not wanting the Boston tug right in the tussle. Worcester and Springfield have an annual race on the river, but Worcester does not want to have a Boston crew in the race. The Worcester-Springfield race will be held on June 15 and it is also expected that a race will be arranged between Springfield and the Boston crew.

NATIONALS IN SESSION AGAIN

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—Despite the wet rumors which had flown thick and fast before the meeting began, the dove of peace was very much in evidence today when the National League baseball magnates reassembled at the Waldorf to continue their powwow. The Brennahan-Murphy feud which threatened trouble was amicably adjusted.

The schedule for the coming season, which was approved and announced, seems to give general satisfaction to the moguls attending the meeting. Likewise President Thomas Lynch's list of umpires gratified the club owners.

At the meeting today changes in the rules governing world series were expected, although nothing of a radical nature was looked for. The chief amendment proposed had to do with the distribution of tickets.

The new Boston magnates, John M. Ward and James E. Gaffney, were pleased with the schedule adopted. It seems as if the dates favored Boston, and the Boston fans will be able to see the reorganized team work on several holidays and many Sundays.

The Pilgrims will open the season on April 18 with the Phillies as their opponents. The Phillies will play Boston for three days and then the New York Giants open a three-game series. The Pilgrims will then take the road, playing at Philadelphia, Brooklyn and New York.

The schedule favored the Boston team in holidays, the Pilgrims having June 17, July 4 and Labor Day on its home grounds and will play but two holidays each in April 19 and May 30. Cincinnati will play two games in Boston on Flanker Hill Day, the Phillies will be the attraction on July 4 and the Giants on Labor Day.

The Saturdays are divided evenly, the Pilgrims playing thirteen Saturdays on the home grounds and thirteen on foreign pastures. Boston will play only four Sunday games, at St. Louis on May 12, at Chicago on July 14, at Cincinnati on August 18 and at Chicago on August 25.

The team will have about the same amount of training as last season, but the jumps will be no harder than they usually have been.

There are no conflicting dates in Boston, and the two big league schedules are so arranged that there will be a few days when both ball parks are gameless.

BANQUET FOR RED SOX QUARTET TO-NIGHT

WORCESTER, Feb. 14.—Paul McHale will give a dinner to the Rex Sox quartet and a few friends of the baseball world, in Barristers' Hall, tonight, at 10 o'clock. The dinner was originally planned for 6 o'clock, but a change in the hour was made to suit members of the quartet.

Introducing the Red Sox Recruits

This is the eleventh of a series of stories to be printed daily in the AMERICAN introducing the recruits of the two Boston Major League teams to the fans. By following the series of articles the followers of the national game will be well acquainted with the histories of the men who are to be tried out by the Pilgrims and Red Sox.

"Buck" O'Brien is a youngster on the Red Sox roster who will be a factor in the race this season. Buck is not exactly new, as he pitched several games for Boston last year, but this season will be his first whole season in big company.

Buck was taken out on the Coast last Spring by the club and given a good workout, but he still lacked a few fine points of the game and was released to the Denver team in the Western League for development. Buck hit his stride with the mountain teams and the Red Sox recalled him at the end of the Western League season.

O'Brien reported when the team was in Philadelphia, and with but a little rest went in and pitched a great game against the Athletics. He also pitched on the Southern trip a few rounds and made a great stir with the fans, and he will have a big following when the playing season opens.

O'Brien is a local boy, living down in Brockton. This Winter he has been spending his spare time on the stage with the Red Sox quartette.

O'Brien began his professional career with the Brockton team of the New England League in 1909. He was sent down to Hartford but was called back to Brockton for the season of 1910. He was signed by the Red Sox in 1911 and taken on the Spring training trip, but was released to the Denver team. With that club he won 20 and lost 7 games and practically pitched to the team to the pennant.

Buck is a small pitcher, being 5 feet 10 inches, weighs about 188 pounds and is twenty-nine years old. The different clubs that he has pitched against believe that he is a wonder and will prove to be the sensation of the league next season.

Manny O'Toole, the Red Sox trainer, is a close follower of Buck, for he believes the Brockton boy has the best assortment of curves he has ever seen and should be a wonder in the American League.

The Uhorn team will find it a mighty difficult proposition to break up the visitors' attack. The Toronto players work together in great shape. They are speedy skaters, they handle their sticks like professionals and their defence is of the best.

In Bleakley, the Canadians have a sensational forward. Caldwell at left wing, Stroms at centre, Webster at cover, German at cover point, Hanley at point, and Parker at goal, are also very steady players.

The B. A. A. team has been working out at the Arena this week and has been put through some hard practice games. The men are reported as being in the best of condition and ready to put up the game of a lifetime.

"WHO else is in this precious scheme besides Jules and yourself?"

"Don't know, on my honor."

"Well, then, tell me this: Why have you been doing to Dimmock's body?"

"How long were you in that bathroom?" Rocco parried, with sullen dignity.

"Don't question me, Mr. Rucker," said Theodore Rackside. "I feel very much inclined to break your back across my knee. Therefore I advise you not to irritate me. What have you been doing to Dimmock's body?"

"I've been embalming it!"

"Em—balmin' it!"

"Certainly—Richardson's system of arterial fluid injection, as improved by myself. You weren't aware that I included the art of embalming among my accomplishments. Nevertheless, it is so."

"But why?" asked Rackside, more mystified than ever. "Why should you trouble to embalm the poor chap's corpse?"

"Can't you see? Doesn't it strike you? That corpse has to be taken care of. It contains—or, rather, it did contain—very serious evidence against some person or persons yet unknown to the police. It may be necessary to move it about from place to place.

"And so it was suggested that I should embalm it, and I did.

"Mind you, I still objected to the murder, but I couldn't go back on a colleague, you understand. You do understand that, don't you? Well, here you are and here it is and that's all."

Rocco leaned back in his chair as though he had said everything that ought to be said. He closed his eyes to indicate that so far as he was concerned, the conversation was also closed.

Theodore Rackside stood up.

"I hope," said Rocco, suddenly opening his eyes—"I hope you'll call in the police without any delay. It's getting late, and I don't like going without my night's rest."

"Where do you suppose you'll get your night's rest?" Rackside asked.

"In the cells, of course. Haven't I told you I know when I'm beaten? I'm not so blind as not to be able to see that there's at any rate a prima facie case against me. I expect I shall get off with a year or two's imprisonment as accessory after the fact—I think that's what they call it. Anyhow, I shall be in a position to prove that I am not implicated in the murder of this unfortunate nincompoop."

He pointed with a strange, scornful gesture of his elbow to the body.

"And now, shall we go? Everyone is asleep, but there will be a policeman within the call of the waiter's bell in the portico. I am at your service. Let us go down together, Mr. Rackside. I give you my word to go quietly."

How the Corpse Was Hid

"Hixy a moment," said Theodore Rackside, curtly. "There is no hurry. It won't do any harm to forego another hour's sleep, especially as you will have to get up early tomorrow. I have one or two more questions to put to you."

"Well?" Rocco murmured, with an air of tired resignation as if to say, 'What must be must be.'

"—where has Dimmock's corpse been during the last three or four days, since he died?"

"Oh!" answered Rocco, apparently surprised at the simplicity of the question. "It was in my room, and one night it was on the roof; since it went out of the hotel as luggage, but it came back the next day as a case of Demerara sugar. I forget where else it has been, but it's been kept perfectly safe and treated with every consideration."

"And who contrived all these manoeuvres?" asked Rackside as calmly as he could.

"I did; that is to say, I invented them and I saw that they were carried out. You see, the suspicions of your police obliged me to be particularly spry."

"And who carried them out?"

"Ah! That would be telling tales. But I don't mind assuring you that my accomplices were perfectly trustworthy. It is absurdly easy for a man like me to impose on underlings—absurdly easy."

"What did you intend to do with the corpse ultimately?" Rackside pursued his inquiry with an immovable countenance.

"Who knows?" said Rocco, twisting his beautiful mustache. "That would have depended on several things—on your police, for instance. But probably in the end we should have restored this moral cleaner again to his proper position in the world among relatives."

"Do you know who the relatives are?"

"Certainly. Don't you? If you don't, I need only say that Mr. Dimmock had a prince for his father."

"It seems to me," remarked Rackside with cold sarcasm, "that you behaved rather clumsily in choosing this bedroom as the scene of your operations."

"Not at all," said Rocco. "There was no other apartment so suitable in the whole hotel. Who would have guessed that anything was going on here? It was the very place for me."

"I grieve," said Rackside sweetly.

"Yes, you guessed, Mr. Rackside. But I had not counted on you. You are the only smart man in the fashion. You are an American citizen, and I hadn't reckoned on having to deal with that class of person."

"Apparently I frightened you this afternoon."

"Not in the least."

"You were not afraid of a search?"

"I knew that no search was intended. I knew that you were trying to frighten me. You must really credit me with a little sagacity and insight, Mr. Rackside.

"Immediately you began to talk to me in the kitchen this afternoon I felt that you were up the track. But I was not frightened. I merely decided that there was no time to be lost; that I must act quickly.

"I did act quickly, but, it seems, not quickly enough. I grant that your rapidity succeeded mine. Let it pass."

Rocco rose and moved toward the door. With an instinctive action Rackside rushed forward and seized him by the shoulder.

"No Tricks," He Warned

"No tricks!" said Rackside. "You're in my custody, and don't forget it."

Rocco turned on the employer a look of gentle, dignified scorn.

"Have I not informed you," he said, "that I intend to go quietly?"

Rackside felt almost ashamed for the moment. It flashed across him that a man can be great even in crime.

"What an inestimable fool you were," observed Rackside, as they stood on the threshold, "was you talents, your unique talents, to get yourself mixed up in an affair of this kind. You are ruined. And, by Jove, you were a great man in your own line."

"Mr. Rackside," said Rocco very quickly, "that is the truest word you have spoken this night. I was a great man in my own line. And I am an inestimable fool. Alas!"

He brought his long arms to his sides with a thud.

"Why did you do it?"

"I was fascinated—fascinated by Jules. He, too, is a great man. We had splendid opportunities, here in the Grand Babylon. It was a great game. It was worth the candle. The stakes were enormous.

"You would admit those things yourself if you knew the facts. Perhaps some day you will know them, for you are a fairly clever person, in getting to the root of the matter. Yes, I was blinded—hypnotized."

"And now you are ruined."

"Not ruined, Rackside. Afterward, in a few years, I shall come up again. A man of genius like me is never ruined till he is dead. Genius is always forgiven. I shall be forgiven.

"Suppose I am sent to prison. When I emerge I shall be as fresh as ever. I shall be Rocco, the great Rocco. And half the hotels in Europe will open to me.

"Let me tell you, as man to man, that you have achieved your ends splendidly. There is no excuse."

"I know it," said Rocco slowly. "Let us go."

Rackside was distinctly and notably impressed by the man—by this master spirit. A man who was in receipt of a salary at the rate of fifteen thousand dollars a year. He soon felt sorry for Rocco.

Rocco, side by side, the captor and the captured, they passed through the vast, deserted corridors of the hotel.

"It will be locked," said Rackside. "We must go to the second lift."

"But I have a key. I always carry one," said Rocco, and he felt in one of his pockets and, unfastening the iron screen, pushed it open. Rackside stood at his readiness and aplomb.

"After you," said Rocco, bowing in his finest manner, and Rackside stepped into the lift.

With the swiftness of lighting Rocco pushed forward the iron screen, which locked itself automatically. Theodore Rackside was hopelessly a prisoner within the lift, while Rocco was free in the corridor.

"Goodby, Mr. Rackside," he remarked suavely, bowing again, lower than before. "Goodby. I hate to take a mean advantage of you in this fashion, but only by you will allow that you have been very simple. I am a man of genius, as I have already said, up to a certain point. It is past that point that my own cleverness comes in. Again, goodby."

Rocco's Rich Sarcasm

"After all, I shall have no rest to-night, but perhaps even that will be better than sleeping in a police cell. If you make a great noise you may bring some one and ultimately get released from this lift. But I advise you to compose yourself and wait till morning. It will be more dignified.

"For the third time, goodby."

And with that Rocco, without hastening, walked down the corridor and so out of sight.

Rackside never said a word. He was too disgusted with himself for listening.

He clinched his fists and put his teeth together, and held his breath in the silence he could hear the dwindling sound of Rocco's footsteps on the thick carpet.

It was the greatest blow of Rackside's life.

The next morning the high-born guests of the Grand Babylon were amazed by a rumor that by some accident the millionaire proprietor of the hotel had been shut up all night locked up in the lift. It was also stated that Rocco had quarrelled with his new master and incontinently left the premises.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with ½ pint of warm water, and stir for a minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle; then add the Sugar Syrup. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

You will find that this simple remedy takes hold of a cough more quickly than anything else you ever used. Usually ends a deep-seated cough inside of 24 hours. Splendid, too, for whooping cough, croup, chest pains, bronchitis and other throat troubles. It stimulates the appetite and is slightly laxative, which helps end a cough.

This recipe makes more and better cough syrup than you could buy ready made for $2.50. It is pleasant to take and acts splendidly.

Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and all the natural pine elements which are so healing to the membranes. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

This plan for making cough syrup with Pinex and sugar syrup (or strained honey) has proven so popular throughout the United States and Canada that it is often imitated. But the old, successful formula has never been equaled.

Ideal Proportions of the Female Figure and How to Acquire Them

By ANNETTE KELLERMANN

FEW women are satisfied with their figures, and the question I am asked most often is:

"What should my measurements be and how much should I weigh?"

To answer as many of them as I can at once, I shall give a chart of the weight and proportions of the American ideal figure.

The celebrated statue of the Venus de Medici is taken by many as the ideal to height. This shows a woman 5 feet 3 inches high, whose waist measures 27 inches, bust 36.6, chest 35.6.

HEALTH, MAGNETISM, VITALITY—THOSE ARE THE REAL IDEALS

But the general ideal of beauty for women seems to call for a taller stature, so I print the proportions for different heights.

Height.	Weight.	Chest.	Waist.	Hips.
5 ft.	109 lbs.	27 in.	22½ in.	32½ in.
5 ft.	109 lbs.	27¾ in.	23 in.	33 in.
5 ft.	112 lbs.	28 in.	23½ in.	33½ in.
5 ft.	118 lbs.	28½ in.	24½ in.	35 in.
5 ft.	125 lbs.	29½ in.	25½ in.	36 in.
5 ft.	132 lbs.	30½ in.	26 in.	37 in.
5 ft.	140 lbs.	31½ in.	26½ in.	38 in.
5 ft.	150 lbs.	32½ in.	28 in.	40 in.
5 ft.	160 lbs.	34 in.	29½ in.	41 in.

Now, most women, especially those devotees of fashion who have whittled their figures down to the last fraction by dint of much exercise and wrong diet, won't approve of these figures.

Naturally not. These proportions mean HEALTH, seldom synonymous with fashion; yet if you put a woman of ideal proportions according to the chart and place her near one of our fashionable lay figures, unless you have no real eye for beauty, you will vote for the ideal proportioned, not the fashionable ones.

The Healthy Proportion

The girl of five feet in height who weighs 100 pounds is not fat, though I know nowadays that women want to be just as slender as possible and look as thin to look as if you would break in two.

It may be fashionable, but it's not healthy, and the reason we have so many neurasthenic, nervous women around with haggard faces is because of the violent methods they employ to getting thin and little under weight according to this chart of ideal proportions.

It's fashionable just now to have drooping shoulders and a flat chest; it's fashionable to glide, or rather drag, one's self along, but these fashions are not going to last.

HEALTH, MAGNETISM, VITALITY—those are the real ideals, and when women acquire the first, fashions must adapt themselves to their demands. Then goodby to the bobbie shirt.

To be healthy you must exercise and you must exercise systematically. Also you must keep in the air.

I believe swimming is about the best exercise in the world for women who have no organic trouble.

Many organic troubles are curable, or at least can be helped by a course of physical culture, but no one should try this without working under the eyes of a trainer.

Swimming has made my figure what it is, and daily exercise in the tank and out of it keeps my measurements the same all the year round.

I seldom wear corsets and I don't need them except to keep a tight frock from wrinkling, if I ever have to wear one, which is not often, for the minute my clothes are tight I feel my muscles getting cramped, and any women whose muscles are cramped is awkward, no matter how much money she has spent in lessons to acquire grace.

How to Be Graceful

Only the body that is perfectly free is graceful, and the body soon acquires a natural grace if it is not hampered with tight clothes.

All children are graceful until they get to the age of self-consciousness. Self-consciousness acts upon the muscles, just as tight clothing does. It cramps them and hinders free, graceful, natural movements.

Every child should be taught to swim and to dance, because these forms of exercise counteract the effect of self-consciousness and are beneficial from the mental side as well as from the physical one.

Swimming develops courage, self-confidence. It helps develop the figure into lines of beauty and grace. The good dancer, on the other hand, acquires that poise of body, the conscious command of every muscle, which is invaluable in giving one a mental poise and balance as well.

Few people realize how very intimate is the relationship between the body and mind. If you control the first you stand a better chance of gaining control of the other, and that is what we are all after in these times, isn't it?

Sayings of the Manicure Lady

She Receives a Few Valentines.

"WELL, George," said the Manicure Lady, "this is Valentine Day, and I never got a single romantic piece of postage at all. You know what I was telling you, George, the other day. I said that I was more likely to get a homely valentine than a pretty one, with lace on it. Well, George, it turned out the way I said it would. I got about a dozen of the grimmest looking comics that you ever saw. Some of them was pictures of chorus girls and the like of that, which made me ashamed of the sex of which I am a member of, and there was others that showed me as a lady peddler with a nose which had an end on it as red as one of them sunsets that Oliver McTeague painted. I am a good kidder, George, but I got to admit this made me have a sore heart was kind of sad and lonely. I was thinking of the little valentine box in the old schoolhouse, the time that I was just a little girl. I remember how the teacher called out my name and how I walked up to the little valentine box and pulled out a valentine that was as full of love as a seminary. On the valentine it said:

"'On lips that dimpled close to mine,
Like that my life have never pressed,
If you won't be my valentine
I'll feel distressed.'

"That guy that put that on the valentine stole it!" declared the Head Barber. "Barbers don't find much time to write poetry, any more than they find time to read it, but it just happens that when I was a kid I read that piece you just read to me.

"George," said the Manicure Lady, "you are balmy on the head."

"What do you mean?" asked the Head Barber.

"Just what I say," declared the Manicure Lady. "A gent that shaves beards can't be expected to climb Mount Saranac, or whatever the name of that mountain is where they make poetry.

"But I ain't going to talk harsh to you, George, and bring tears to your eyes on St. Valentine's Day. I am going to hand you a good laugh instead. Listen to this one verse which was wrote on the bottom of one of the comic valentines I got:

"'Gallopher, nail-snipper, fly away home.
I wonder that men wore their nails long in Rome.

Your heart's like a bang-nail, shaded with dirt.
Nail-snipper, nail-snipper, fly away home!'"

DON'T PULL OUT THE GRAY HAIRS, A SIMPLE REMEDY RESTORES THE COLOR

"Pull out one gray hair and a dozen will take its place," is an old saying, which is, to a great extent, true, if no steps are taken to stop the cause. When gray hairs appear it is a sign that Nature needs assistance, and it is a warning call for help. Gray hair, dull, lifeless hair, or hair that is falling out, is not necessarily a sign of advancing age, for there are thousands of elderly people with perfect heads of hair without a single streak of gray.

When gray hairs come, or when the hair seems to be lifeless or dead, some good, reliable hair-restoring treatment should be resorted to at once. Specialists say that one of the best preparations to use is the old-fashioned "sage tea" which our grandparents used. The best preparation of this kind is Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, a properly prepared, delicate sage and sulphur, scientifically compounded with later discovered hair tonics and stimulants, the whole mixture being carefully balanced and tested by experts.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is clean and wholesome and perfectly harmless. It refreshes dry, parched hair, removes dandruff and gradually restores faded or gray hair to its natural color.

Don't delay another minute. Start using Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur at once and see what a difference a few days' treatment will make in your hair.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists.

Valentine's Day

By THOMAS TAPPER

A YEAR ago today, at noon, a boy about fourteen years old, ran along the street, his face all smiles and his eyes as bright as stars.

As he ran on his smile broke into a laugh, and he waved his hand as if greeting a friend. Then he turned toward the curb, and said:

"Hello, Peter, I've got a valentine for you."

He rubbed his friend Peter on the nose—for Peter was a black horse attached to a heavy traveling wagon.

"Peter," he said again, "here's your valentine; two of them.

The boy took from his pocket two little packages, each done up in a bit of newspaper. In one was half an apple, which he gave to Peter first. Peter enjoyed that half an apple a great deal, but no more than the boy enjoyed watching him eat it.

"Now, Peter," he said, "here's another valentine.

And unrolling the other package, he took out two lumps of sugar. Peter was long on sugar, and the boy was, after all, a boy. So he held the sugar lumps to Peter's nose and drew them away again, plagueing him a bit.

Finally he said:

"All right, Peter, one at a time."

And it took Peter a very short time, indeed, to dispose of both of them. Then the boy laughed, and laid his cheek against Peter's nose.

And that is all there is to the story.

Except this:

The boy loved Peter like a friend, and in the morning when he started out to work he ate half an apple, and took the trouble to do up the other half for his dumb friend. He also realized the temptation to eat the other half during the morning. And perhaps the sugar tempted him, too, for a boy of fourteen has an appetite that knocks louder on his stomach than opportunity is supposed to knock on the door of the ambitious young man.

But he kept Peter in mind until noon.

The boy knew it was Valentine's Day. He told Peter so, when he ran up to him. So he started out in the morning to work, say, about 7 a. m., with Peter's valentine in mind, as well as in his pocket. In other words, he had thought out beforehand just how he would celebrate Valentine's Day by giving Peter a treat.

Now, I do not know what the half apple and the two lumps of sugar cost the boy, or the boy's mother, for he bought them at retail, of course, and it may have been two cents, or, say, three cents.

For this amount the boy could have bought a red and blue valentine with an ugly face on it, and some verses which express a foolish thought, and he could have mailed it to a human being, say, to a friend of his own age.

A good many people do that very thing with two or three cents on Valentine's Day. The result differ. Some see the joke and laugh. Others get mad and never speak to the sender again. In either case no one is the better off for ugly valentines, except the man that sells it for a penny, and I am not so sure that he is any better off for dealing in them.

But—

A year ago to-day the boy with his face all smiles ran up the street, waved his hand and shouted:

"Hello, Peter, I've got a valentine for you."

And when Peter had swallowed his valentine with much content, the boy laughed and laid his cheek against Peter's nose.

And that, as I said once before, is all there is to the story.

Except what it all means.

Daysey Mayme's Valentine

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

O!, thou man god with feet of clay,
And manner many pedantic,
Wilt thou name the wedding day,
And make my joy gigantic?

"There's something wrong," said Daysey Mayme Asplunn, wrinkling her noble brow just like the writers in the books, "with the feet of that verse. However," chewing on her pencil preparatory to proceeding, "there is nothing wrong with the feet of clay."

I've waited four years for this chance.
Eternity for a spinster.
Wouldst thou refuse her this romance
And refer years against her?
("Poetic license," explained Daysey Mayme.)

I've hunted valentines by the score,
With none to fit the situation;
I've chewed pencils, ten and four,
In writing this here inspiration.

It's heart distress to court the men;
It's brain fag to court the muses;
It's waste of time and ink and pen;
And a great big blow when the man refuses.

It causes wrinkles to get wed;
It causes double and triple chinnies;
It's safer to be cold and dead,
Then get returns from such a sonnet.

But I want a man, 'cause it's the style
For a young and divorce him.
I want the habit for a while,
I——

(An ice pack failed to bring relief. Being temperamental, she gazed out into the night for inspiration, and it was not in vain. "I'll give a prize for that misspelled word," she exclaimed with enthusiasm. "Any contest that puts the brain of the reading public into action is educational. What happy thought!")

A prize I'll give for missing line,
Perhaps my hand in marriage;
Perhaps my company out to dine.
To ride there in a carriage.

("Of course," she said, looking dreamily at her four and ten chewed pencils, "I wouldn't be mean enough to refuse a gentleman that I had given the bad luck not to rhyme with marriage.)

I want a man with cash to burn;
I don't care what his name is;
I've reached an age when I don't yearn
To play the game by rules of Cupid.

I'd decorate this verse with hearts,
If I knew how to make them,
Tho' men are nearer reached by tarts,
And I'm the first to own that.

"A girl who goes courting," said Daysey Mayme, "is not expected to tell the truth. No girl would ever have a chance if she told the truth about herself.

"I want to close with something about matrimony and alimony, but I think the men will understand what I want without it. That may not be the best poetry, but it is plain enough for the men to comprehend, and men are particularly stupid at recognizing a proposal of marriage. When a poem is as hard to understand as directions for picking out a crochet pattern, it's a classic. This is not a classic. It's a valentine."

Then Daysey Mayme took off her ice pack and became interested in the fashion book's styles for spring brides.

Hopeless

THE local member of Parliament was eloquent, to put it very mildly. In his own opinion, at all events, he was equal to the finest word-deliverer who ever existed.

On one occasion he visited a farming district in his constituency, and let himself loose in a flow of eloquence that completely bewildered his audience.

At the close of the proceedings the chairman proposed a vote of thanks, one of the most rural of his rural friends.

"Well, Giles," said he, "what did you think of my speech?"

"Silly," answered the honest yeoman, "you might have typhoid and measles" (meaning pneumonia, and get over it; "and then you'd have a fever and shake it; but hang me, if you ever get lockjaw, you're done."

Then the member went away and began to puzzle it all out.

Eczema Banished from One-Year-Old Boy

Resinol Ointment Succeeds After Failure of Many Medicines

Eczema is the commonest and most troublesome of skin diseases. There are a great many varieties of it, and it appears in numerous forms. But itching is the most pronounced and most distressing feature. Skin specialists say that 50 per cent. of all itching skin diseases is Eczema. Special diet, rigid hygiene and medical treatment for the many forms are usually advised, but the first thing to relieve the itching and burning is Ointment will do this at once, and it has cured many cases where the ordinary treatment has failed completely.

"When my son was about one year old, he was covered from head to foot with Tooth Eczema. The doctor gave him different medicines, but he did not improve. I saw your advertisement in a druggist's window, and procured a cake of Resinol Soap and a jar of Resinol Ointment, and am thankful to say he was soon entirely free from it, and without a blemish. We keep Resinol Ointment and Soap on hand constantly and find them good for all kinds of eruptions."

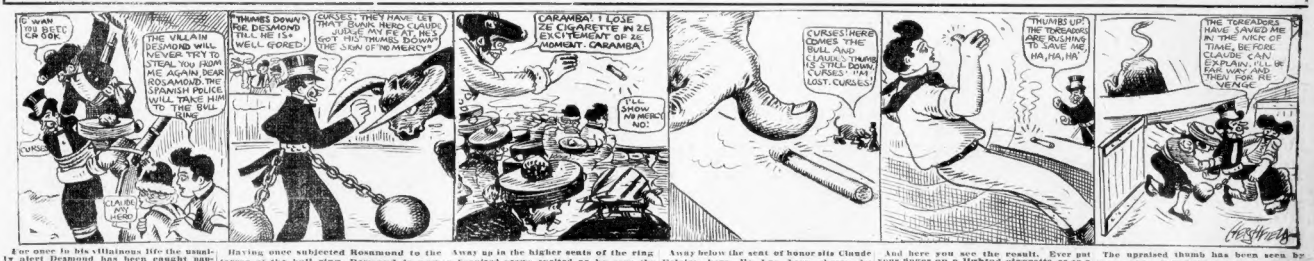
A Thumb and a Burning Cigarette Are Quickly Dissolved Partnership

By Hershfield



I'D WAN DE BEST CR OOK
THE VILLAIN DESMOND WILL NEVER TRY TO STEAL YOU FROM ME AGAIN DEAR ROSAMOND. THE SPANISH POLICE WILL TAKE HIM TO THE BULL RING
CURSE!
CLAUDE MY HERO!
"THUMBS DOWN" FOR DESMOND TILL HE IS+ WELL GORED!
CURSES! THEY HAVE LET THAT DUNK HERO CLAUDE GOT HIS THUMBS DOWN THE SIGN OF NO MERCY!
CARAMBA! I LOSE ZE CIGARETTE IN ZE EXCITEMENT OF ZE MOMENT. CARAMBA!
I'LL SHOW MY HERO NO!
CURSES! HERE COMES THE BULL AND CLAUDE'S THUMB IS STILL DOWN. CURSES! I'M LOST. CURSES!
"THUMBS UP" THE TOREADOR ARE RUSHING TO SAVE ME HA, HA, HA
THE TOREADORS HAVE SAVED ME IN THE NICK OF TIME, BEFORE CLAUDE CAN EXPLAIN I'LL BE FAR WAY AND THEN FOR MY VENGE

For once in his villainous life the usually alert Desmond has been caught napping. While snoring in the brigand's cave he was captured by the heroic Claude Eclaire, assisted by the Spanish police, and he is now in the toils of the law once more. Desmond, however, does not get flurried. It is no new experience for him to be caught by the police, and he usually manages to escape.

Having once subjected Rosamond to the terror of the bull ring, Desmond is now to have a taste of his own medicine. Heavily chained, the scoundrel is put in the arena and a savage bull loosed at him. The bull fighters stand around awaiting the signal from Claude. When that hero turns his thumbs up, Desmond is to be saved from further attacks from the bull.

Away up in the higher seats of the ring a Spaniard grows excited as he sees the bull rushing upon Desmond. The spectator jumps up in his seat and the shock causes his cigarette to fall. As the Spaniard is much addicted to the foolish custom of smoking cigarettes, his loss causes him to utter many strong Spanish words. And even graver consequences will result.

Away below the seat of honor sits Claude Eclaire, hero. He has been chosen by the King of Spain to give the signal of "thumbs up" or "thumbs down" to decide the punishment of Desmond. Naturally Claude wants to see the villain properly paid for his crimes, and here you see him in the act of pressing down his thumb. But ah! the cigarette.

And here you see the result. Ever put your finger on a lighted cigarette, or on a burning match? Made you jump, didn't it? Almost as bad as a hot potato which is proverbially dropped quickly. So you need not be surprised to see even the iron-nerved Claude jump high in the air waving his thumb aloft. It is well enough to talk about going through fire, but in real life——

The upraised thumb has been seen by the watching bull fighters and they hasten to the aid of Desmond. Deftly distracting the bull's attention, they rush the manacled man out of the ring, where he instantly begins to form new plans for the confusion of Claude and the capture of the beautiful Rosamond. He may succeed. We can't tell, however, until tomorrow.

A big fight is expected at the annual meeting of the Central Leather Company in February 28, as controlling interests and minority stockholders are in conflict again. The new protective committee proposes to try to oust seven directors who are paid $50,000 a year each for what, it is claimed, are "nominal services." President E. C. Hoyt, who is also a director, gets $40,000 a year salary. In 1910 the company had a deficit of $830,000 after paying preferred dividends. The common stock amounts to $40,000,000 and from quotation of 50 in 1909 has dropped to about 20. The directors do not hold much common. The new stockholders' protective committee is headed by former Governor Edward C. Stokes of New Jersey, and behind him are about fifty of the largest shareholders. There are fifteen directors and eight of them get the usual fees. The other seven get more than is paid to any other board of directors in this country, not excepting those of the United States Steel Corporation.

Wall Street hears that there will be no great coal miners' strike this spring and official confirmation of agreement between men and mine operators is expected soon. But no confirmation of the report could be obtained in London last night. The strike is due, if it happens, the last day of this month, but the impression prevails abroad that it will be averted. About one-third of the 800,000 miners in the United Kingdom are opposed to going out. District strikes are expected, but no universal one. The miners are insisting upon owners accepting the principle of a minimum wage for all men and boys working under ground. More than 40,000 Derbyshire miners have given notice they will quit. Similar action is expected by others today and tomorrow.

When the annual meeting of the Waters-Pierce Company is held in St. Louis tomorrow a contest for control between H. Clay Pierce and Rockefeller interests is a possibility. It is being reported and denied in Wall street that the Pierce interests are unhappy because of stock distribution limited to the segregation of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey. The Waters-Pierce dividend has paid not dividend since 1908. Heavy losses have absorbed all its earnings since that year.

Standard Oil stock reached the highest price since 1901, when it sold at $45, on the New York Curb yesterday. It sold yesterday at 70 and there was not offered under 69 at the close. Within the last decade it has sold as low as 590. It has been quoted at 595 since the United States Supreme Court rendered its adverse Standard Oil decision.

It appears that the protected coal waiting has knocked big holes in the reserve supplies of hard coal which had been accumulated in the large markets and mine operators are by no means so well prepared for the threatened strike, when the agreement with miners expires, as had been expected. Shipments of hard coal by original anthracite roads for January last totalled 5,765,696 tons, which is a decrease of 140,423 compared with the same month in 1911. Shipments of bituminous last January were 31,000,000 tons. It was all mined during last month. Much of it was consumed by railroads and steamships. The second month's amount is 28,000,000 tons. A year ago there were 800,000 tons on hand that the stock of anthracite on ground is less than the amount consumed during the same month. There will be a conference held in New York on February 27, and if no agreement is reached the miners will quit on April 1.

LYNN BROKER DENIES PROMISE TO MARRY

John A. Herne, the Lynn broker and real estate dealer, in his answer to the $50,000 breach of promise suit of Mrs. Evelyn A. Bangs of Lynn, filed at Salem, says that if there ever existed between him and Mrs. Bangs a promise of marriage it was procured by Mrs. Bangs through a misrepresentation as to her past life. Mrs. Bangs has had four husbands, it is alleged, and Herne was to have been the fifth.

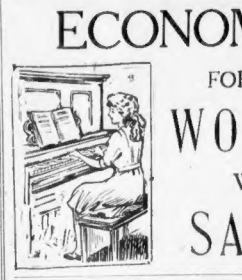
HOUSEHOLD ECONOMY
FOR THE WOMAN WHO SAVES



YOU, MISS CAREFUL HOUSEWIFE, save on everything you buy for your table. You buy tub butter because it costs less than print butter, but just as good. You buy a side of lamb and get the chops, roast and soup bones. You buy evaporated cream for the coffee instead of fresh cream. And so on right through the list. Now, why don't you use the same good sense on the so-called luxuries? Listen—We sell pianos—real pianos, of all kinds, at all prices. If you want a piano, come out here and we'll sell you one at a price that will save you enough to have ice cream and cake every day if you want it. You can get pianos here at lower prices than anywhere else in the world. And our terms are the most liberal. Make it a point to come out here and talk it over with us this week. Buy a piano and let yourself and your children have some enjoyment in life, to break the monotony of household drudgery.

The Longshoremen's Strike Affords to the Entire Country a Splendid Exhibition of Good Citizenship and Respect for Public Peace

The 3,000 men, members of the Boston Longshoremen's Trade Council, who went out on strike nearly six weeks ago, have gone back to their work, as the result of a conference with the agents of the steamship companies, which ended in a form of compromise or mutual concession.

The losses on both sides are large. The men lost heavily in money not earned; the companies lost through confusion to business and their inability to handle freight as it was sent to them for transportation by the merchants of New England; that all the business interests of Boston suffered goes without saying.

The ending of the strike, therefore, is a source of congratulation to every interest, wage-earning and wage-paying.

Strikes are ugly things. Their occurrence is a great blot upon our civilization, a vivid reminder to us that even now, with our centuries of experience for a guide, we are still, with all our boasted advance, far from a sane solution of this immense problem of capital and labor.

Strikes are, as a general rule, visitations of gloom whose shadow rests upon a community long after both sides have buried the hatchet and work has been resumed.

There are exceptions to the rule, fortunately, and the strike just ended along the Boston waterfront is a decided exception.

With all its loss and suffering, it was almost worth the strike, to see brought out and displayed before the community the splendid virtues of good citizenship which those striking freightmen made.

Consider the conditions. Three thousand men on strike, idle, with time on their hands, with open saloons all around them, and with every incentive to disorder, if not to riot, by the presence of strike-breakers, brought in to take their places.

Yet so orderly have those striking longshoremen been all through those trying weeks that not once was it necessary to ask for police intervention to protect the strike-breakers or to preserve the peace.

Not one arrest, not one act of violence, not even a case of intoxication among those men during their strike from its opening to the close!

This is a record for the Longshoremen's Union to be proud of, and every member of it can go back to his work, not feeling that he is a beaten or a humiliated man, but feeling proud of his union and proud of his own behavior as a citizen.

Those men have taught a lesson which must not be lost upon Boston or upon the country at large.

Public order was preserved by them, and the grand superiority of the American wage-earner was never more brilliantly brought into the daylight. In no large commercial centre of Europe could such an exhibition be made.

The secret is, the men had leaders who are sane, self-respecting, patriotic citizens. They are men who proved that, though leaders in a labor quarrel of magnitude, they were jealous of the good name of their city of Boston as the abiding place of law and order. For this, all good citizens owe them no small measure of appreciation.

The day the waterfront strike was called, the officers of the Longshoremen's Council provided recreation rooms for their members. In those rooms every day, as the men gathered for conferences, there were recitations, there were little plays, there were lectures, and now and then an impromptu concert. The men's pipes were kept filled and creature comforts were appeased so far as the union's finances would allow.

Above all there was the strict mandate to keep away from the docks and the waterfront while the strike was in progress. Any member of the union found loitering near the docks would be disciplined by fine or by suspension, and so far as known no occasion arose for the infliction of either punishment.

Not a single extra policeman was drafted into the strike district. Only once were the precinct police given any trouble. And this was the result of some boys throwing snowballs or pieces of ice at a group of strike-breakers.

Those strike-breakers, mistaking the union men's forbearance, went out of their way on more than one occasion to force a quarrel which might have ended in a serious riot.

Several of those importations strutted through the streets of the Charlestown dock district, armed with cotton bale hooks and small hammers openly displayed as they swaggered past the union men's quarters. On one Sunday they marched in a body to a restaurant directly across the street from the union men's hall. There were scores of other eating places to which they might have gone, not so close to the scene of trouble.

Their action was plainly one of provocation, as deliberately chosen as it could be. But the union men kept their heads level. Those of them, who were standing on the sidewalk before the hall entrance, quietly made way for the others to pass.

Where else could two such hostile crowds come face to face without serious breach of the peace?

During the six weeks of the strike, not one man deserted his union. The Longshoremen go back to their jobs with their ranks unbroken, having given the entire community a demonstration of solidarity, of united action and of respect for discipline, of which they may well feel proud.

For the ending of the strike much credit is due to the Civic Federation of New England, which, through its zealous secretary, Mr. John B. McPherson, labored long and earnestly to bring about a settlement. And it should not be kept secret that the Hon. Seth Low, ex-Mayor of New York, as a national officer of the Civic Federation, took an active part in the restoration of amicable relations between the companies and their men.

But, for the splendid order which prevailed throughout the strike, to the credit of Boston, these committeemen of the Longshoremen's Council are entitled to unstinted praise:

William Dempsey, Michael Keavey, George Brady, John Fogarty, James Welsh, Adam McBain.

In the hands of such men as these not only the cause of organized labor, but law and order and public peace shall always be safe in every section of this great republic.

ECONOMY AS AN AID TOWARDS SUCCESS

Written for the Boston American

By Dr. C. H. Parkhurst

THIS is addressed to young men with a view to encouraging in them habits of economy.

The practice of economy may not perhaps be counted exactly as a moral virtue, but it comes exceedingly near to it.

There is a great deal of difference between living up to the limit of one's income and saving from that income five cents a day or even a dollar a month; and that difference shows itself in a great variety of ways.

For one thing, it fosters a man's self-respect.

I know a clergyman who had no bank account and nothing in the shape of money that he could carry about in his pocket, but who was accustomed on Saturday to borrow ten dollars from a friend that he might have it with him on Sunday and have his pulpit efforts stimulated by a sense of cash.

It was rather a poor way of getting inspiration, but it illustrates our point; and if borrowed money will do that, much more will do it if the money is one's very own.

Saving of Five Cents a Day Will Have Its Effect.

Also, although five cents a day rescued from one's spendings is not much, it may in the final issue make all the difference there is between being buried in the potter's field and owning a comfortable house on a main avenue.

If a start is made in the right direction, it does not make much difference how big a start it is.

If a young fellow begins by putting aside five cents a day, the ambition to accumulate will grow upon him, and he will be surprised to discover presently how many places there are where he can lop off some unnecessary and perhaps foolish expenditure that yields him only a momentary gratification, and one, it may be, that is more to his harm than to his advantage.

Without being miserly and without cutting so close as to be stingy with one's self, there are small sums paid out every day by a host of young men that would amount to quite a big sum in the course of a year, and which, if economized and put by, might easily become the beginning of a very comfortable competency.

And the moral effect of the economic habit is that it tends to bolster up a fellow's desire to lead a straight, clean, temperate life.

The man who is ambitious to see his pile grow will be restrained by that ambition from loose indulgences that shrink the pocketbook in the same proportion that they pander to the body.

Even a small bank account or a single small share of stock is a sort of salvation to a young fellow growing up in the midst of the thousand allurements of a spendthrift city.

* * *

FOR a man to want to do something that is a little out of the ordinary and a little better than the ordinary, is some indication that he is competent to do it.

At any rate a person of that kind, who reaches for a helping hand, ought to have the best possible guidance and encouragement extended to him.

A letter received from a young fellow of twenty-seven inquires by what means he can become able to write for the newspapers.

He has been working in a printing office and seems in that way to have acquired the desire to write something of his own, instead of doing nothing but set type for other people's writing.

He Must Know Facts and Have a Wide Experience.

To be specific, he must have a mind well stored with facts gathered from the past and present and, in particular be deeply in the swim of current life and event. Facts have to be taken as they are and cannot be extemporized. A man cannot write about the world, nor to the world, unless he is in the world, with every pore of his mind and body open to the atmosphere with which the world is pervaded; which means, among other things, that he must be able to think in the vocabulary of our current thought.

Besides that he must have ideas of his own, ideas that bear the stamp of his own personality, not mere quotations from other's minds.

A written thought to be effective must not be simply the truth, but the truth as it has been run in the groove of the mind of the writer, and colored by the complexion of the writer's own personal quality.

If what he writes he writes as everybody else writes it, nobody will read it.

The best writing is that in which the distinctive quality of the author is most clearly in evidence.

At any rate this is the kind of writing that will stand the best chance of being read.

A Large Vocabulary Is Essential to a Writer.

Cold type is not inspiring and will chill the reader unless there is enough of the writer's self in it to take the frost out. An essential to effective writing is a large vocabulary.

That gives opportunity to use exactly the word that fits the idea. There is never more than one best word.

With only a few terms to choose from, some rambling, nebulous word will have to take the place of the best word, and that spoils everything by making the writing vague and insipid.

He Writes About His Pa's Poetry

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

AS I have often sed, sed Pa to Ma & me last nite, there is a awful differns between potry & verse. For instans this is verse:

I had a littel pony,
It had a shiny coat;
I raced it at the racetrack
& it finished like a goat.

Now, sed Pa, there is no questun in anybody's mind that there is sterling merit in that as verse, but it isent potry. Potrey is verse & more. Potrey must paint in the minds eye sumthing that one can see, like, for instans, these lines of mine wich I read at the Banket of the Fish Dealers.

The bluefish, awful bullog of the sea,
Fights like a patriot to gain his rights.
You peepul know that wen a bluefish bites
He fights thru hook and leader and is free.
Let us all be like bluefish in the sea
That we may claw our way to Liberty!

I suppos you note the differns, sed Pa to Ma. Sure, I note the differns, sed Ma. One with any branes can tell it at a glanse. The first peece you red was potrey & the last peece, like one about the bluefish, was half a dozen lines of cheese.

Pa dident like what Ma sed very well. He smiled kind of hard & sed Well, I will give you one more illustrating, & maybe it will be a better one. This poem I rote cumf wen I was in the far North, Pa sed. Me & a fellow trapper had been lost for four days wen we struck camp warn a halfbreed gave us food & shelter. I felt so grately to that halfbreed, Pa sed, that I rote a poem for him wich went:

Oh, thou immortal breed! Wen first we came,
Tingling with frost to thy most tender care,
We felt a sense of sumthing like to shame
To think of eeting from thy scanty fare.
For ten long days and nights near death we toosed,
Tingling with frost!

Well, now, sed Pa, what do you think of that? I suppose you will go so far as to tell me that isent potry. "Tingling with frost," I guese that is a purr line, "what? sed Pa.

I guess you must have been tingling with sumthing else besides frost wen you rote it, Ma sed. I can show you sum real potry of mine, sed Ma. Listen:

A cowslip yellow in the swamp
Close to a ruined mining camp.

Pretend to speak to a flower—
The cowslip had a streek of yellow!

Wen did you rite that awful dogger!? sed Pa.

I was fooling, sed Ma, I dident rite it. I found it in an old book of yuro own poems.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

DENIAL BY MR. BRUNS

Editor AMERICAN:

In an article recently published in your paper concerning the dissolution of the organization formerly known as the First Independent Christian Science Church of East Orange, in which I am mentioned as former first reader of the said church, I notice that I am credited with making a statement to the effect that the object of dissolving the said independent church was for the purpose of reorganizing and starting the church anew. I wish to deny making such a statement, and to say that I have no intention of taking part in forming another Independent Christian Science Church, and am not aware that any reorganization is contemplated.

Editor AMERICAN:

To read the editorials of the AMERICAN is to get knowledge. They present to us conditions and facts that it is well to know.

They make for better conditions, in that they educate, and like a good meal, one good editorial serves the purpose of keeping us in thought.

We do not all agree, as in many things we differ, but on the whole, we sum up the sum and substance and find that the editorials of the AMERICAN are good.
